The regulations were made on 18th January 1982 and come into operation on 15th March 1982.

These regulations amend the Health Services (Superannuation) (War Service, etc.) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1978 which provide for the war service of certain members of the Health and Personal Social Services Superannuation scheme to count at half its length for the purpose of calculating superannuation benefits payable to or in respect of them.

A person who was unable to have his war service reckoned for benefit purposes because he transferred from the Health and Personal Social Services superannuation scheme to certain other schemes before 17th July 1975, will, subject to certain conditions, be able to have his reckonable war service transferred to that scheme. Similarly a member of the Health and Personal Social Services superannuation scheme may have his reckonable war service transferred from another scheme to the Health and Personal Social Services superannuation scheme where a transfer payment is made to the Department.

Certain officers who were in public health services employment following war service but were previously excluded from the Health Services (Superannuation) (War Service, etc.) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1978 may now make application under those regulations to have their war service reckoned for benefit purposes.
