

BRITISH FIRE OFFICE,

STRAND AND CORNHILL, LONDON.

INSURANCES against Loss or Damage by FIRE continue to be made on Houses, Buildings, Manufactoryes, Goods and Merchandize, Ships, Vessels, Barges, and every kind of Craft, with their Freight, Cargoes, and Stores, in any Harbour, River, or on any Navigation, FARMING STOCK, and all other property, in any part of Great Britain and Ireland.

Persons who remain uninsured, will do well to reflect on the many calamities occasioned by FIRE; and of the dreadful consequences to many individuals: and as property, in general, has considerably increased in value, those already insured should re-consider their policies, and make such addition as prudence may suggest.

Annual payments due at LADY-DAY, must be made within Fifteen Days therefrom, or the benefit of the Policy will be lost; but insurance may be renewed after, without a new policy.

Printed proposals and conditions of Insurance, and a list of the Directors, Trustees, &c. may be had gratis, and of the Agents in all the cities and principal towns in England, Scotland, and Wales.—For the convenience of their friends in Ireland, they have established an Office in Dame Street, Dublin, where, and of the Agents in the principal cities and towns, proposals are also to be had gratis.
