UNIVERSITIES (SCOTLAND) ACT, 1889.

At Edinburgh, the 8th day of October 1895.

WHEREAS by the Universities (Scotland) Act, 1889 (hereinafter referred to as the first-mentioned Act), it is enacted by section 5, sub-section 3, that all the property, heritable and moveable, belonging to any University or to any existing College forming part of such University at the passing of this Act, shall be and is hereby vested in the University Court of such University from and after the date at which the new University Court under the said Act shall have been declared by the Commissioners to have been duly constituted; and by sub-section 4 of the same section, that the University Courts constituted by sections 8, 9, 10, and 11 of the Universities (Scotland) Act, 1858, shall continue in office until such time as the new University Courts under the first-mentioned Act shall have been declared by the Commissioners to have been duly constituted: And whereas on the 10th day of April 1890, a declaration was made by the said Commissioners that the new University Court of the University of St. Andrews was duly constituted: And whereas, in the course of an action depending before the Court of Session, having reference to an agreement between the University of St. Andrews and University College, Dundee, and to certain proceedings of the Commissioners following thereon, an interlocutor has been pronounced by the said Court, applying a judgment of the House of Lords, the terms of which judgment and interlocutor are alleged to have the effect of displacing the said declaration by the Commissioners: And whereas it is desirable to remove all doubts as to the due constitution of the said Court.

Therefore, without prejudice to the effect of their said previous declaration, the Commissioners hereby declare—

That the new University Court of the University of St. Andrews has been duly constituted in terms of the said Act.
