WHITEHALL, OCTOBER 11.

The King has been pleased to appoint Mr James Walker to be one of the Ordinary Clerks of Session in Scotland, in the room of Mr Charles Gordon, resigned.

ADMIRALTY-OFFICE, OCT. 11, 1803.

Copy of a letter from Captain Griffiths, of his Majesty's ship Constance, to Captain Broughton of the Penelope, transmitted by Lord-Keith.

His Majesty's ship Constance, moored in the Elbe, Sept. 22, 1803.

The two French privateers which were fitting out up the Elbe at Harboursch in Hanover, viz La Caroline of 8 guns, and 35 men, and La Sophie of 10 guns and 40 men, both of whom, I received intelligence on the 18th had come down to Cuxhaven two days before, but as I found they were inside the Jetty, I could do nothing with them: on the 20th they came out with a fair wind, and a view, I believe, of trying the vessels, exercising the people, and escaping by the North Elbe, should chance befriended them. I dispatched all the boats after them under Lieutenant Napier, but the sea was too much wind and sea, in such a tide's way, to admit their attacking them. They appear, however, to have succeeded in causing them to separate, the Caroline hauling her wind for Cuxhaven, La Sophie bearing up for the North Elbe; the latter run on shore on the south part of the Vogel sand, when the other bore up to prevent the boats destroying her. Next morning I got under weigh and succeeded in cutting off the Caroline from Cuxhaven, whom I captured about two miles from that place. The wind increasing, on sending to anchor near the one on shore, the struck her colours also, and the boats attempted to take the people out, but the heavy sea on the sand rendered it impossible; during the night the wind chopped round to the N.W. and blew very hard: It brought so high a tide, that at 3 in the morning she got off with the loss of her rudder, and I should imagine otherwise a good deal damaged, however she reached Cuxhaven I think.

I am, &c. A. J. GRIFFITHS.
Captain Broughton, his Majesty's ship Penelope.
