FOREIGN OFFICE, October 29, 1912.

His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs has received from His Majesty's Minister at Sofia, a telegram, dated October 28th, to the following effect:—

The Port of Bourgas has been mined, and is consequently closed to shipping for the present.

FOREIGN OFFICE, October 31, 1912.

His Majesty's Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs thinks it would be as well to state that the fact that a British merchant vessel has been stopped, visited, or searched at sea by a warship of a belligerent Power is not of itself a matter of which the owner has a right to complain, or which would, unless in exceptional circumstances, justify diplomatic action by His Majesty's Government. It should also be understood that the Secretary of State cannot properly comply with requests of shipowners and others interested in cargoes consigned to ports within the theatre of war in the East to demand the immediate release of vessels stopped and detained upon the high seas on the ground that they are carrying contraband of war, have been guilty of breach of blockade, or are rendering unneutral service to a belligerent. Vessels are detained in such cases in the exercise of belligerent rights, and if a vessel in such circumstances is diverted from her course and taken to a belligerent port, the matter is one to be investigated primarily by the Prize Courts of the captor. Diplomatic intervention can only properly be invoked if, after the final decision of the Prize Courts has been given, such finding appears to be so contrary to recognised principles of international law as to constitute a denial or failure of justice.

FOREIGN OFFICE, November 1, 1912.

His Majesty's Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs has received from His Majesty's Minister at Athens a translation of a Law published in the Greek Government Gazette of the 8th (22nd) ultimo, with regard to the transfer of merchant vessels to neutral flags in the time of war.

The terms of the enactment are as follows:—

Article 1.

The change of flag of an enemy vessel for that of a neutral State when taking place after the commencement of hostilities is invalid, unless it be proved that the change did not take place as a means of avoiding the consequences entailed by the enemy character of the vessel.

Proof of absolute invalidity exists—

1. If the change took place during the voyage or whilst in a blockaded port;
2. If the right of repurchase has been agreed upon;
3. If the conditions governing the right to the flag according to the legislation of the country whose flag is acquired have not been observed.

Article 2.

It is forbidden for Greek vessels during the war to change their flag for that of a neutral State without the permission of the Minister of Marine.

Violation of this provision is punished with imprisonment up to 6 months.

Article 3.

The operation of the present Law commences on the publication thereof in the Government Gazette.

Athens, October $\frac{8}{22}$, 1912.
