

lever of his grenade before he was ready to fire, and thereupon threw his rifle on the ground, calling to Lieutenant Wright to escape. The officer, however, fearing that the man would be unable to get away in time, rushed past him, seized the rifle, and held it to his body in order to minimise the force of the explosion. He was so severely injured as to necessitate the amputation of both legs and one arm. The man who was firing escaped from the trench by another exit.

Lieutenant Wright undoubtedly risked his life in endeavouring to save the life of another.
