SUPPLEMENT TO THE
LONDON GAZETTE EXTRAORDINARY.
OF FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 5.
SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 7.

DOWNING-STREET, September 6.

A dispatch, of which the following is an extract, was this day received by the Right Hon. Charles James Fox, his Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, from Hugh Elliot, Esq. late his Majesty's Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary at the Court of his Sicilian Majesty.

Extract of a Dispatch from Hugh Elliot, Esq. to the Right Hon. Charles James Fox, dated Palermo, 5th August 1806.

S I R,

I inclose herewith the copy of a letter of the 3d of August, which I have received this day from Sir John Stuart.

By the surrender of Cotrone, and the retreat of both General Verdier and General Regnier from Upper and Lower Calabria, those provinces are now restored to their legal Sovereign.

The battle of Maida, upon the 4th of July, will long be recorded in this part of Europe as a memorable proof of the superiority of British courage and discipline.

Of the nine thousand men which General Regnier commanded in the province of Calabria Ultra, not more than three thousand are left to attempt their retreat towards Puglia; the remainder are all either killed, wounded, or made prisoners. Every fort along the coasts; all the depots of stores, ammunition, and artillery, prepared for the attack of Sicily, are become the prey of the victors; and, what perhaps may be considered as even of still more consequence than those advantages, an indelible impression is established of the superior bravery and discipline of the British troops.

[Price Sixpence.]

There is not perhaps to be found in the annals of military transactions an enterprize prepared with more deliberate reflection, or executed with greater decision, promptitude, and success, than the late invasion of Calabria by Sir John Stuart.

Extract of a dispatch from Major-General Sir John Stuart to Hugh Elliot, Esq. dated Messina, 3d August 1806.

Having occasion to send an express to my Aide-de-Camp, Captain Buikley, at Palermo, I avail myself of the opportunity to acquaint you with another fortunate result of our auspicious day at Maida. Cotrone, with all its stores, magazines, &c. and six hundred troops, (now prisoners,) capitulated on Wednesday evening last to the land and naval forces of his Britannic Majesty, under Lieut.-Colonel M'Leod, of the 78th regiment, and Captain Hoste, of his Majesty's frigate Amphion, who were assisted in their operations against that place, and upon the adjacent coasts, by the gun-boats of his Sicilian Majesty. Three hundred prisoners, who prove to be survivors of the wounded, after the action of the 4th ult. are already arrived in this port.

General Regnier, who had endeavoured to hold his position; under much embarrassment for some time past, between Cotrone and Cantanzaro, has retreated precipitately towards Tarento; and it was reported when the transport left Cotrone, that he had been attacked by the masse, and had lost six or seven hundred of his flying people.

I am now to congratulate you on the total evacuation of Calabria Ultra, in which single province, previous to the action of the 4th, we have every certainty that the enemy had a distributed force of at least nine thousand men; of these, when General Regnier quitted his position, near Cotrone, certainly not three thousand remained. The losses of the French in Upper Calabria have also borne a proportion.

A great deal of heavy ordnance, lately transported by the French to Cotrone, besides what was found mounted on the castle, amounting in the whole to about forty pieces, have fallen into our hands.

A dispatch, of which the following is a copy, has been received by the Right Hon. William Windham, one of his Majesty's principal Secretaries of State, from General the Right Hon. H. E. Fox, Commander of his Majesty's forces in the Mediterranean.

S I R, Messina, Aug. 3. 1806.

I have the honour of inclosing to you the capitulation of Cotrone, as well as extracts of two letters received this day from Lieut. Colonel M'Leod, of the 78th regiment, and addressed to Major General Sir John Stuart, who had detached that officer for the purpose of giving support to the armed peasantry on the adjacent coast, and of making an attack on that place itself.

Lieut. Colonel M'Leod appears to have conducted himself with the greatest judgment and activity in this service, and to have received the most ready co-operation, and essential assistance, from Captain Hoste, of his Majesty's ship Amphion, who has all along acted in conjunction with him. I have the honour to be, &c.

(Signed) H. E. Fox.

Right Hon. W. Windham, &c. &c.

Extract of a letter from Lieutenant Colonel M'Leod to Major General Sir John Stuart, dated Amphion frigate, off Cotrone, 27th July 1806.

By the letter I had the honour of addressing to you on the 24th instant, accompanying the duplicates of my letters of the preceding evening, you will be aware that it was my intention to move, in conjunction with Captain Hoste's squadron, to this place on the following day, under an impression that a feint on the enemy's rear, and this his sole remaining depot, would induce him to divide his force, and of course make it so much the more easy for the Chiefs of the masse to succeed!

in their projected attacks on his position at Cantanzaro.

The fleet got under weigh accordingly at eight o'clock P. M. and the following morning (although a considerable distance from the shore) I had the satisfaction to observe the French army in full retreat towards Cotrone; as their route or road appeared to run nearly parallel to, and with in gun-shot of the beach, and to be bounded on the opposite side by a chain of mountains, no better an opportunity could be offered, apparently, for an actual co-operation with the masse. With this view, Captain Hoste made a prompt disposition of his frigates and small craft, while the transports were directed to make sail towards a point considerably in front of the enemy's column, and to make a demonstration of landing there; this appearance occasioned, in the first instance, a halt of the enemy's column, and, in the next, a change of its direction towards the mountains.— Captain Hoste was enabled to open a brisk cannonade on his centre and rear, which appeared to be immediately affected by it, and in an hour's time occasioned those parts of his column to break and disperse in the mountains. The enemy's loss in this affair amounted to about fifty or sixty wounded, who were brought in waggons to Cotrone this morning. After the dispersion of the enemy in the mountains, the fleet made all sail towards this place, his supposed destination, where the frigates and transports came to an anchor, after exchanging a few shot with the citadel, at eight o'clock in the evening. In the morning we discovered that the enemy's army had not yet arrived; but under an anxious expectation for their appearance, a disposition was made with the transports and men of war to give him every possible annoyance; and accordingly, having permitted him quietly to take up his position within gun-shot, the frigate's broadside was brought to bear upon him, and in the space of half an hour completely dislodged and obliged him to take up a new position without the range of her guns, in the mountains.

Amphion frigate, off Cotrone, 6 P. M.
29th July 1806.

Several appearances in the French encampment concurring with other information I had received on the morning of the 27th, that the enemy meditated a move, I thought it proper to detain a communication I had prepared for you on that day, until I could convey more decided intelligence on this important subject. I have now the utmost satisfaction in acquainting you that the greatest part of the French army retreated, in a northerly direction from Cotrone, just before daylight on the morning of the 28th inst.

Immediately on obtaining this information, I dispatched expresses to the different chiefs of the masse, requiring them to concert arrangements for a close pursuit, and pointed out the many advantages they must consequently have over a flying and dispirited enemy in their mountains. I have, however, not yet been able, through any source, to discover satisfactorily by which of the routes to the northward he has retired. Some state it to be in the direction of Tarentum, to join a small force in that province; others as positively assert that he is endeavouring to pass by the mountains to Cosenza, and by that route to Cassano.— Such is the imperfect intelligence I have on this point, that I have not yet been able to determine so important a question.

The enemy's route from this city has been marked by circumstances of the most cruel devastation. The village of Strongoli, with several others within our view, which he conceived hostile to his cause, have been ransacked and burnt to the ground.

Our information of yesterday stated that one thousand men had been left to garrison the town and city of Cotrone. But several deserters who joined us this morning, having mentioned that the greatest part of this force had marched to join their army in the course of the night, Captain Hoste agreed with myself in the propriety of summoning the town and citadel to surrender to the forces under our orders, conceiving that the immediate possession of what we understood to be the enemy's sole depot, and his dernier resort in Lower Calabria in point of position, together with the removal of his stores, &c. might contribute to prevent his attempt to re-enter the province.

I have now the pleasure to inclose copies of the summons, and of the terms of capitulation finally agreed upon between us. I trust our judgment in this proceeding will be confirmed by your approbation.

I shall find it, however, necessary to disembark a considerable part of my battalion this day to cover the evacuation of the town and citadel, and to superintend the completion of the other articles of the capitulation. After which I shall immediately re-embark, and propose to make the best of my way to Messina on the 2d or 3d of August, unless previously I may receive such information as may alter my opinion, that the French have completely evacuated Lower Calabria for the present.

I am sorry to say, that a good deal of sickness has prevailed in the 78th since it sailed, in consequence of their previous fatigues, and that it has lost eight men. The disease is, however, not spreading; and having appointed an hospital ship, I trust its progress will be completely checked.— This unpleasant circumstance will hasten my return to Messina, unless I receive contrary instructions.

The number of prisoners and deserters now with this fleet amount to about five hundred, of which number one half and upwards are sick and wounded.

The enemy being, I believe, now completely driven from the Lower, if not both Calabrias, I cannot resist this opportunity of offering my congratulations on so brilliant a result to the expedition undertaken by the army under your immediate command, which cannot fail to be recorded in the British annals as an achievement of the first order. I have, &c. P. McLEOD.

Major-General Sir John Stuart, &c.
I have just received intelligence which I can rely upon, that the route which the enemy pursued yesterday was by Strongoli and Cino, and I am to conclude he will pursue that route coastwards to Cassano.

COPY of the SUMMONS to the French garrison of Cotrone.

The Officers commanding the naval and land forces of his Britannic Majesty hereby summon you to surrender the town and citadel of Cotrone to the British forces now before it.

The Officers who deliver this summons to you are directed to lay before you such articles of capitulation as we are disposed to grant, and to wait one hour for your answer.

Being perfectly aware of your present circumstances, you may believe that this summons is dictated under mature deliberation, and with a view of saving that effusion of blood which must be the consequence of resistance on your part.

W. Hoste, commanding his Britannic Majesty's Squadron.

P. McLEOD, commanding his Britannic Majesty's troops

To the Officer commanding the French garrison of Cotrone.

TERMS of CAPITULATION finally agreed upon between the Officers commanding the British sea and land forces, and those commanding the French troops in the citadel of Cotrone.

Art. I. The French troops are to march out of the citadel of Cotrone at ten o'clock A. M. the 30th July 1806, with the honours of war, to that part of the beach where the flag of truce was this day received, and there deposit their arms, and immediately after embark on board of transports, to be sent to Messina, where they are to be considered prisoners of war till regularly exchanged.

II. The sick and wounded are in a similar manner to be sent to Messina, attended by their own surgeons and assistants, and are afterwards to be considered and exchanged as prisoners of war.

III. Officers are permitted to wear their swords, and are to be considered as prisoners of war until exchanged.

IV. The troops of his Britannic Majesty will preserve order and tranquillity in the city.

V. All private property which belongs, bona fide, to either officers or soldiers, will be respected.

VI. All public property that there may be is to be delivered over, with a proper inventory, to the Officer who takes possession of the place.

VII. The surgeons will attend their own sick and wounded, as mentioned in Art. II. but all civilians who have attended the French army will be considered as prisoners of war, in consequence of the principle established by the French Government during the present war.

VIII. The British troops will take possession of the gates of the town of Cotrone between eight and ten o'clock to-morrow morning; the French garrison will march out of the citadel at ten o'clock A. M. precisely, and be immediately embarked for Messina, agreeably to Art. I.
