DOWNING STREET, SEPTEMBER 12, 1807.

(Dispatches from Rear-Admiral Murray, continued from our last.)

The transports having the troops and artillery on board, being in three divisions, I directed Captain Thompson in the Fly, who had made himself acquainted with the river, and particularly the place intended for landing, which was near Barragon, to lead the first division, having with him the Dolores schooner and four gun-boats; Captain Palmer in the Pheasant, to lead the second division, with the Haughty and two gun-boats; and Captain Prevost in the Saracen to bring up the rear of the third division; Captain's Bayntum and Corbet to superintend the landing of the troops.

At day-light on the 28th, the wind being favourable, I made the signal to the Fly to weigh a general signal to weigh, and immediately after a general signal to weigh, having ordered the Rolla to be placed on the west end of the bank, as a guide to the ships to join. I shifted my flag to the Flying Fish, and General Whitelocke went in with me. As soon as the first division of the transports anchored, I made the signal to get into the boats, and immediately afterwards to put off.

Soon after nine A. M. the first boats, with Brigadier-General Craufurd's division, landed about a mile to westward of the fort, from which the enemy had some time before withdrawn their guns. A creek being found soon after the first boats landed, the whole were got on shore without opposition, or any accident, except that several of the transports were aground, but got off without damage.

The conduct of the officers and men on this occasion induced me to give out the accompanying general order. Two hundred seamen, under the orders of Captains Rowley and Joyce, were thought sufficient to land for the present; and I feel much indebted to those officers who had made themselves acquainted with the river, and piloted the squadron and transports.

Lieutenant Bartholomew, of the Diadem, who was strongly recommended by Admiral Stirling, for his knowledge of the river, embarked with me; and I feel it my duty to state to their Lordships, that he was of infinite service; as were Lieutenant Talbot, of the Encounter, Lieutenant Acott, of the Rolla, and Lieutenant Herrick, of the Raisonné, who undertook the pilotage.

On the evening of the 28th, the Paz and Staunch joined; the Staunch had taken a sloop, and destroyed two others of a convoy going to the south shore for troops. I have directed Captain Thompson, in the Fly, towards Buenos Ayres, with the Staunch, Paz, and Dolores, to endeavour to keep up a communication with the army.

I have the honour to be, &c.
GEO. MURRAY.

Extract of a Letter from Rear-Admiral Murray, dated Neireide, off Buenos Ayres, July 8, 1807.

SIR,

By my letter of the 30th ult. their Lordships will be informed, that the army under the command of Lieutenant-General Whitelocke, was landed without opposition or accident on the 18th near Barragon, about twenty miles to the eastward of Buenos Ayres.

On the 30th, the Nereide, small craft, and transports weighed; and anchored again to the westward of Quelmes; the next morning I went in shore in the Flying Fish to endeavour to communicate with the army, having directed some transports with provisions to go close in, in case the army should want supplies.

Captain Corbet, in his boat, discovered some of our troops, and sent Lieutenant Blight, of the Nereide; on shore: he with difficulty got to them, being obliged to pass through a deep bog: on the 2d Lieutenant Blight returned, and informed me he had seen General Whitelocke the evening before; that the army had suffered most severely on their march, having very deep marshes to pass, and having been obliged to leave their provisions behind him; were much in want of bread and spirits, which were immediately landed from the Encounter and transports. As I understood that General Gower had advanced towards Buenos Ayres, I directed Captain Thompson in the Fly, with the gun brigs, to get as near as he could: the same day I received a letter from Colonel Bourke, Quarter-Master-General, to say he was directed by General Whitelocke, to inform me that he had marched on, and meant to go to the westward of Buenos Ayres, requesting I would send the ships having heavy artillery there, and likewise provisions. I immediately sent the gun boats to join the Fly and gun-brigs, and directed Captain Thompson to get as close in to the westward as he could. The transports with the guns, and those with provisions, as well as an hospital ship, I likewise sent there, and am happy to say they were all in shore on the 4th, ready to meet the army.

On the 5th a firing was observed in the town; I desired Captain Thompson to make use of the gun-brigs and boats, when he could, without annoying our own people, who appeared to be both to the eastward and westward of the town. A communication was opened with the army in the morning; they had stormed and taken possession of four guns, near the citadel; bread, spirits, and ammunition were supplied from the ships.

On the 6th I directed the Encounter to endeavour to communicate with the army on the east side of the town, and supply them with what they might require. An hospital ship was likewise sent that way.

The Nereide was moored up as high as she could go, being in less than three fathoms, but still nine miles from the town. At one P. M. I received a letter from Captain Thompson, saying our affairs at the west end of the town were in a most distressing state, Brigadier General Craufurd and the whole of his brigade taken prisoners, and that a truce had been demanded and granted; at the same time requesting more transports might be moved up, in case it should be necessary to re-embark the troops.

I immediately went up to the Staunch gun brig, which was about a mile from the shore, and abreast of the post occupied by Sir Samuel Auchmuty, and ordered the Medusa, Thisbe, and Saracen, which were left off Barragon, to come up as high as they could with safety.

Captain Thompson, who was with the General, came off to me immediately, but was obliged to have a guard to protect him to the beach, although close to the gun-brig; but it was dark. At eight P. M. I received a note from General Whitelocke, informing me he had arrived there to see what more could be done by the gallantry and exertion of the army under his command, whose sufferings in every way had seldom, under any circumstances, been exceeded. Of one thing he was certain, that South America could never be English.

The inveteracy of every class of inhabitants was beyond belief. He wished to see me, as he had sent General Gower to General Liniers, in consequence of a letter he had received from the latter.

I cannot help taking this opportunity of saying how very active Captain Thompson of the Fly has been, who placed the gun-boats, which were commanded by Lieutenant Fraser of the Medusa, and Lieutenant Heron of the Saracen.

Early in the morning of the 7th, the Staunch telegraphed to say I was wanted on shore immediately; a flag of truce was still flying at our head-quarters. On my going on shore the General shewed me the proposals made by the Spanish General, Liniers, (a copy of which I inclose), and observed, that he was of opinion, as well as were the other generals, that it could answer no good purpose to persist, and that one great object was attained, that of getting all the prisoners back that had been taken in South America this war; that the destroying the town could not benefit us; and that he saw no prospect whatever of establishing ourselves in this country, as there was not a friend to the English in it; that the number of our prisoners the enemy had were in the power of an enraged mob; and that persisting on our part would make their situation truly distressing; the number of our killed and wounded, although not exactly ascertained, was said to be very great. Under these circumstances, and being persuaded that the people of this country did not wish to be under the British government, I signed the preliminaries, trusting that what I have done will meet their Lordships approbation.

I have directed Captain Prevost, of the Saracen, to be ready to proceed to England as soon as General Whitelocke's dispatches are ready, and to receive Sir Samuel Auchmuty for a passage, with Colonel Bourke, who carries the General's dispatches.

I have not yet had any returns from Captains

Rowley or Joyce, who are still with the seamen that landed; but Lieutenant Squarry, of the Polyphemus, who was with his men in the advance brigade, I took off yesterday wounded, but not badly; he informs me that only one of his men is missing.

GEORGE MURRAY.

Head-Quarters, Plaza de Toros,
July 7, 1807.

SIR,

We have the honour to acquaint you, that actuated alone by the motives stated to you by Major General Leyeson Gower, we consent to the terms proposed.

Officers shall be named to meet others appointed by you, to make immediate arrangements for the reception of prisoners, the embarkation of the British army, and other subjects.

We have the honour to be, &c.

(Signed) J. WHITELOCKE.
G. MURRAY.

His Excellency General Liniers.

Preliminary Propositions agreed for between the General of the English army and that of the Spanish army in the river Plata.

I. There shall be from this time a cessation of hostilities on both sides of the river Plata.

II. The troops of his Britannic Majesty shall retain for the period of two months from this date, the fortress of Monte Video; and as a neutral country, a line drawn from St. Carlos on the West, to Tando on the east; and there shall not be on any part of that line hostilities committed on either side; and in that space all English delinquents shall be judged by the English military law, and all Spanish delinquents by the Spanish law.

III. There shall be on both sides a mutual restitution of prisoners, including not only those which have been taken since the arrival of the troops under Lieutenant-General Whitelocke, but also all those his Britannic Majesty's subjects captured in South America since the war.

IV. There shall not be any impediments thrown in the way of the supplies of provisions which may be required for Monte Video.

V. A period of ten days shall be given for the re-embarkation of his Britannic Majesty's troops to pass to the north side of the river Plata, with all their arms, cannon, stores, and equipage, at the most convenient points which may be selected, and during that time provisions may be sold to them.

VI. During the period of four months no impediment shall be thrown in the way of the commerce of the British merchants.

Answered—Inadmissible, because contrary to the Spanish laws.

I. Additional—When Monte Video is restored, it is to be uninjured, with the Spanish artillery originally belonging to it.

II. Additional—That there shall be mutually three officers of rank exchanged until the fulfilment of this treaty, it being understood that those British officers who have been in this country on their parole, are not again to serve in South America until they have been landed in Europe.

Nereide, off Barragon,
June 29, 1807.

GENERAL ORDER.

The commander in chief is happy in the opportunity afforded him of expressing his thanks to the officers and seamen under his command, as well as to the masters and seamen of the transports, for their great exertions in landing the army under the command of his Excellency Lieutenant-General Whitelocke, on the shore of Barragon yesterday.

He highly approves of the very judicious manner in which Captains Prevost, Thompson, and Palmer, placed their respective ships, as well as the gun-brigs and other armed vessels under their orders, for covering the landing. Much praise is due to the lieutenants and commanders of those vessels for getting so near the shore.

He feels himself particularly obliged to Captains Baytun and Corbet, who had orders to superintend the landing, for their zeal and activity in getting the troops on shore, and for the regularity with which it was conducted. He is likewise thankful to Captain Irwin, agent of transports, and the lieutenants under his direction, for the assistance they afforded on this occasion.

And although no opposition was made to the landing, he is convinced that it would have been conducted in the same regular manner had the enemy been there to oppose them.

The commander in chief has likewise great pleasure in assuring the officers and seamen, that his Excellency Lieutenant-General Whitelocke expressed to him, in the highest terms, his satisfaction on this occasion.

(Signed) GEO. MURRAY.

Nereide, off Buenos Ayres,
July 10, 1807.

SIR,

Since my letter of the 8th inst. I have seen Captains Rowley and Joyce, who were landed with the seamen, and am happy to find two only are missing.

I mentioned Lieutenant Squarry of the Polyphemus, being wounded. The persevering conduct of Captains Rowley and Joyce, and the officers and seamen under their command, merits the highest encomiums. They had to drag the cannon for miles through the swamps, and the men were almost always harnessed to them. The general has, no doubt, expressed in his dispatches his thanks to them.

Captain Prevost, who will have the honour of carrying the dispatches, will give their Lordships any farther information: (I left the Saracen with some gun-boats at Barragon after landing, lest it might have been necessary, from bad roads, for the army to fall back): I beg leave to recommend him to their Lordships protection as an active, and very zealous officer.

I have the honour to be, &c.

GEO. MURRAY.
