ADMIRALTY-OFFICE, JUNE 28, 1808.

A Letter and its inclosures, received from Vice Admiral Sir Edward Pellew, Bart. Commander in Chief of his Majesty's Ships and Vessels in the East Indies, addressed to William Marsden, Esq. dated on board the Culloden, Griesse Harbour, the 14th December 1807, conveys the following intelligence.—

It appears that the Vice-Admiral had sailed from Malacca on the 20th of November last, and had arrived with the Squadron of his Majesty's ships named in the margin,* off point Panka, at the eastern extremity of Java, on the 5th of the following month, with the troops embarked on board them; that, in conjunction with Lieutenant-Colonel Lockart, commanding the troops, he had sent a commission under a flag of truce to treat with the commandant of the Dutch naval force, for the surrender of the ships of war lying at Griesse; and by copies of the correspondence which passed in consequence, it appears that the Admiral had caused the ships named at the foot hereof to be burnt (they having been previously scuttled by the Dutch); that all the guns, military stores, &c. in the garrison of Griesse, had together with the battery of Sambelangan, on the island of Madura, been most effectually destroyed.

Sir Edward expresses his approbation of the zeal and perseverance manifested by the respective officers and men employed upon the service above mentioned.

- Revolutie, of 70 guns.
- Pluto, of 70 guns.
- Kortenaar, of 68 guns, sheer-hulk.
- Ruttkoff, Company's ship, of 1000 tons, pierced for 40 guns.
