JUDICIAL SALE

OF

THE ESTATE OF HARRIS, IN INVERNESS-SHIRE, &c.

To be Sold by Public Roup, within the Parliament or New Session House of Edinburgh, before the Lord Ordinary officiating on the Bills, upon Wednesday the 26th day of June next, between the hours of two and four o'clock afternoon,

Lot 1st, THE ESTATE of HARRIS, which forms part of the chain of Islands, commonly denominated the Lewis or Long Island, and consists of the Main Land of Harris, and a number of adjacent Islands. The Property extends to about 93,500 Scots acres, whereof about 7,000 are arable, and the greater part of the remainder, valuable hill pasture.

The Estate produces about 700 tons of kelp yearly, the greater part of which is known to be of superior quality. For several years preceding 1826, the kelp netted upwards of £2,000 yearly. Since that date its value has been depreciated, but there is a probability of its speedy revival.

There is also an abundant supply of shell manure, and drift sea-weed on the shores.

The valuable cod and other sea fishings on the shores of the Estate are becoming more productive yearly. The salmon-fishings connected with the property may also, under skilful direction, be turned to good account.

There are several safe and accessible harbours on the property, and a good carriage road through the south and west parts of the main land.

There is a tolerably good Mansion-house, with Offices and Walled Garden on the main land close to the ancient Priory Church of Rodel. A good deal of Wood has been planted in the Glen of Rodel, and the Property abounds with romantic and interesting scenery. To a Sportsman the situation is most inviting. There is abundance of red deer, grouse, ptarmigan, snipe, and all description of water and sea fowl, and capital rod fishing in the lakes and streams.
