It is with inexpressible concern that I am to acquaint you that Colonel Campbell, of the 3d guards, died this morning of the wound he received in the action of the 20th instant. The loss of this invaluable officer to the service is irreparable, and by his country ever to be lamented.

Major-General Burrard, with all the officers (three or four excepted that were left with me) and soldiers, are removed to Lille, where I expect to be sent as soon as I am sufficiently recovered of my wounds.

I have the honour to be, &c.

WHITEHALL, July 21.

A dispatch, of which the following is a copy, has been received from the LORD LIEUTENANT of Ireland by his Grace the Duke of PORTLAND, his Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Home Department.

MY LORD,

Dublin Castle, July 15. 1798.

I have the honour to acquaint your Grace, that it being reported that the mountains of Wicklow were a receptacle for bodies of rebel fugitives, I directed Lieutenant-General Lake to move different columns, in various directions, to clear that part of the country. He returned to-day to Dublin, and reports, that he was not able to find anybody whatever assembled in any part of that district.

The Lieutenant-General gives the highest credit to the perseverance and spirit of the troops during very long and difficult marches through a country almost inaccessible for troops.

On Monday last the rebels, which had been in the mountains, passed over to the Bog of Allen. On Wednesday they attacked, with a body of about 1500, the town of Clon, and where they were repulsed with the loss of sixty men by Colonel Blake, who marched from Mullingar, and attacked them with about fifty infantry, and as many yeomen cavalry. This body of rebels, after their defeat, proceeded towards Killocock, and were pursued till night by a detachment under Brigadier-General Meyrick. The rebel army advanced to Dunboyne, and on Friday moved to Garristown Hill, whither I ordered Major-General Myers, with a detachment of the Royal Buckinghamshire militia and yeomanry from the garrison of Dublin, to pursue them. The rebels, however, went off for the Boyne, and passed it; but were checked near Stackallen by cavalry detached from two columns commanded by Major-General Wemyss and Brigadier-General Meyrick, who had assembled on the road to Slane.— And I have the honour to transmit to your Grace a copy of a letter received by my military secretary, Captain Taylor, from Major-General Wemyss, giving an account of the action.

I have the further satisfaction to acquaint your Grace, that last night, about seven o'clock, Captain Gordon, of the Dumfries fencibles, with a detachment of infantry and cavalry, fell in with that part of the rebels which had returned across the Boyne near Garristown, killed 20 of them, and took 200 horses.

I have the honour to be, &c.

His Grace the Duke of Portland, &c.

CORNWALLIS.

SIR,

Drogheda, July 15. 1798.

Having received information from different quarters on Friday afternoon that a large body of rebels had assembled about Garristown, and were marching towards this, I went out with what force I thought it prudent to take from the garrison here to Duleek, where I arrived at ten o'clock at night the 13th, and got information that the rebels were strongly posted upon a hill three miles off to the right. Not knowing the country, I remained in Duleek till one o'clock. When I marched to the hill, I found the rebels left it on our coming into Duleek the evening before, and halted at a village near it. I followed them to the village. They had left it about five hours before towards Slane. I thought it probable, from a note I had received from General Meyrick, that he was to march from Taragh Hill to attack the rebels at Garristown, that I should hear of him at the Black Lion, and went on about half a mile; when I saw General Meyrick's division coming into the Black Lion. We immediately proceeded by two roads towards Slane, as we were informed they were posted above Lord Boyne's house. When we came there, they had left it about three hours, and had passed the Boyne above Slane. Finding that we did not come up with them, General Meyrick sent on Lieutenant-Colonel Ord, with the Durham cavalry, to overtake them, and keep them in check, which he did about four or five miles from us on the north side of the Boyne road to Ardee, and sent back for a reinforcement of cavalry. I ordered Colonel Maxwell, with the Dumfries, with General Meyrick, to move on, and they found the rebels very strongly posted behind a defile between two bogs, the pass only allowing them to pass by fours. The cavalry drove in their advanced post, and charged with great spirit; but from the position of the enemy Colonel Maxwell thought it better to wait till the infantry came up, which I did with the Sutherland Highlanders in a very short time, and advanced with my battalion guns. Whenever the rebels perceived us, I saw them get into confusion, and they immediately broke in all directions. I then ordered the cavalry and yeomanry to attack, and I followed with the infantry to support them. The rebels got into the bogs, and the cavalry advanced, killed all they met with, and surrounded the bog to the height on the opposite side. The Highlanders got into the bog, and killed all that were in it.

Those who got out on the opposite side were met by the cavalry. From the manner in which they dispersed, I cannot give an exact account of the killed. We took a great quantity of pikes, pistols, swords, muskets, &c. and two standards. General Meyrick got one prisoner, who gave him some information, and promised him more. He took him with him to Navan, so that I cannot report any thing with accuracy about him.

The troops behaved with great spirit, and bore a great deal of fatigue, particularly General Meyrick's division, with a reinforcement from this of the Dumfries, and my light company has been out three nights. I am particularly indebted to the gentlemen yeomanry, and to Mr Trettu Duheln, who served me as a guide. Any body of the rebels left went on towards Ardee. A great many got round the hill on our right, and came back to Slane, where they assembled near it, crossed the Boyne, and went back towards Garristown, where I hope General Myers will fall in with them. I reported this to General Campbell last night, being under his command, and just now received a note from him to inform you of it.

ADMIRALTY-OFFICE, July 24.

Extract of a letter from the Earl of ST VINCENT, K. B. Commander in Chief of his Majesty's ships and vessels in the Mediterranean; to EVAN NEPEAN, Esq. dated on board the Ville de Paris, off Cadiz, June 30. 1798.

I enclose a letter from Captain Pierrepont, of his Majesty's sloop the King's Fisher, relating the capture of a small Spanish privateer.

My LORD, King's Fisher, Oporto Roads,
May 31. 1798.

I have the honour to inform your Lordship, that on the 26th inst. being off Vigo, I fell in with and captured L'Avantiva Ferrolina, Spanish lugger privateer; mounting one carriage gun and four swivels, and manned with twenty-six men.

I have the honour to be, &c.

CHARLES H. PIERREPONT.

The Right Hon. Earl St Vincent, &c.

Extract of another letter from the Earl of ST VINCENT, K. B. to EVAN NEPEAN, Esq. dated on board the Ville de Paris, the 3d July 1798.

I Enclose, for the information of the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, the report Captain Digby, of his Majesty's ship the Aurora, has made of his last cruise. The active services of this young man cannot be too highly commended.

June 16. I gained my station, and sent Lieutenant Lloyd during a fog to reconnoitre with two boats an armed vessel that had been seen, reporting on his return, having followed her into Curmes, where two Spanish vessels were at anchor. I stood into the bay to cover him in the boats taking or destroying them, which he effected by burning a brigantine loaded with hemp and iron, scuttling a schooner with various merchandize, and brought the boats off with three men wounded, two of them slightly, by the musquetry from the town, and a wall-piece from an adjacent mount.

Standing on the 19th for Cape Prior in thick hazy weather; a ship with five merchant brigs were seen steering along the land to the eastward, the wind westerly. By two P. M. I could distinctly see the ship was an enemy, carrying 18 or 20 guns, making with the brigs for the harbour of Cedeira, which he entered about four; every preparation was made, if possible, to destroy them in that port, which I stood in for; at half past four opened a fort on the N. E. side of the town, which, with the ship under French colours, commenced a fire on the Aurora, which was returned in hopes still of driving all the vessels on shore; but soon losing the wind, and being nearly land-locked, I was obliged to avail myself of the way the ship had not yet lost, to tack and stand out, leaving with certainty only two brigs on shore, the corvette or privateer ship at the extremity of the harbour, which the charts describe as shoal; the fort damaged, and silent probably from the bursting of a gun, which a seaman on the look out aloft supposes to have happened; about six the Aurora, by sweeps and towing, was out of the harbour without damage.

Chasing a cutter on the 20th, and a lugger on the 21st (belonging to Guernsey), carried me far into the Bay. On the 22d, I chased a ship off Cape Machichicao, scudding with a N. W. wind, in a direction between me and the land. It soon proved to be a corvette, or large French privateer ship, carrying to appearance 20 guns; for on distinguishing the frigate she hauled in for the land, and anchored in an opening under a fort between three and four P. M. At four, I brought the ship to the wind within half a gun-shot of the enemy, her colours flying, on a lee-shore, with three anchors a-head. After giving her three or four broadsides, her cables and mast shot away, she went on shore, the sea making a fair passage over her; on which I made fail to clear the eastern land, carrying out from thirteen to nineteen fathoms water; the fort firing without effect.

By the report of a Spanish fishing boat on the 24th, off Bilboa, I understand the place where she was lost to be Baquio, or near it; their account of her loss of men killed and wounded appears exaggerated; her name they did not know, but I believe she sailed last from St Andero, where she had lately carried in a valuable English vessel.

The wind being easterly, I sent this evening Lieutenant Lloyd to examine, and, if necessary, destroy a coasting vessel in an inlet called Finis; he returned in an hour, having scuttled and set fire to her, loaded with wrought iron, bringing two Spaniards on board.

H. DIGBY.
