DESPATCHES, of which the following are Copies, have been received from Vice-Admiral Sir Charles Napier, K.C.B., Commander-in-Chief of Her Majesty's Ships and Vessels in the Baltic:—

CAPTURE OF TWO TOWERS OF BOMARSUND.

No. 354. Bulldog, off Bomarsund, August 16, 1854.

1. At four o'clock in the morning of the 13th instant the French battery, of four 16-pounders and four mortars, opened a splendid fire on the western tower, which commands the fortress of Bomarsund and the anchorage; a white flag was displayed in the afternoon, which led to nothing; but on the morning of the 14th the tower was surprised by the Chasseurs. General Jones's battery of 32-pounders was finished in the night, and ready to open; but not being wanted was turned against the eastern tower, and on the morning of the 15th he opened his fire; the battery was manned by seamen and marine artillery from the four ships named in the margin,* under the direction of Captain Ramsay of the Hogue, assisted by Commander Preedy, Lieutenant Somerset of the Duke of Wellington, and the officers named in the margin;† their fire was beautiful.

2. At six p.m. one side was knocked in, and the tower surrendered.

In the attack on the western tower the Chasseurs, with Minié rifles, were employed so successfully that it was difficult for the enemy to load their guns; in the attack on the eastern tower we had no Chasseurs, and they were enabled to load their guns with more facility.

3. Our loss has been trifling, one man killed and one wounded, but I have to lament the death of the Honourable Lieutenant Cameron Wrottesley, R.E., who was mortally wounded by a cannon ball, and died twenty minutes after he had been sent to the Belleisle.

4. The enemy had 6 men killed; 7 wounded, and 125 were taken prisoners. I have sent the latter to the Termagant.

5. The loss of the French at the western tower was also trifling.

6. Both batteries were admirably constructed and admirably fought, which accounts for the small loss. General Jones speaks in high terms of the conduct of the seamen and marine artillery, and the precision of their fire.

7. During the time the operations were going on, General Baraguay d'Hilliers was employed in establishing his breaching batteries against the great fortress, and the French and English steamers, as per margin,* supported by Trident (bearing the flag of Rear-Admiral Penau), Duperré, Edinburgh, and Ajax, kept up a well-directed fire from their shell guns, and very much damaged the fortress, whilst Captain the Honourable F. T. Pelham, of the Blenheim, kept up a beautiful fire from a 10-inch gun, landed in the battery we had driven the enemy out of a few days before. His position was one of great danger, but the battery was put in such good order by Captain Pelham that the men were well covered, and he had no loss.

8. The General's breaching batteries will be ready by to-morrow, and they shall be well supported by the ships-of-the-line of both Nations, and the steamers. The narrowness of the ground on which the General has established his breaching battery, very much circumscribes the space; the greatest caution will be necessary to prevent firing on his troops, and the little space in the anchorage before Bomarsund, and the intricacy of the navigation, will prevent ships approaching the main fortress so near as could be wished ; but when the batteries are established acting in the rear of the fort, and supported by the shell guns in front, it cannot hold out more than a few hours.

9. I have put off to the last moment the departure of the mail, but I shall send an extra courier the moment the fort surrenders.

10. The western tower was fired either by accident or design, I do not know which, and blew up at 11 A.M. yesterday.

11. I am sorry to add that Lieutenant Cowell, Royal Engineers, Aide-de-Camp to Brigadier-General Jones, was unfortunately wounded in the leg by the accidental discharge of his pistol; he is now on board the Belleisle, doing well, but the loss of his services is much to be regretted.

I have, &c.,

(Signed) CHAS. NAPIER,
Vice-Admiral and Commander-in-Chief.

The Secretary of the Admiralty.

P.S. A return of the whole of the force landed, and of casualties, will be forwarded by the next opportunity, together with an inventory of stores and list of prisoners.

SURRENDER OF BOMARSUND.

No. 355.

*Bulldog, off Bomarsund,
August 16, 1854.*

In continuation of my despatch of this date, I beg you will inform their Lordships that after sending away the mail the fortress opened a heavy fire on Captain Pelham's battery, which had annoyed them much, and which he maintained all yesterday and to-day, and it is wonderful how he and his men escaped. He had with him Lieutenant Close and Mr Wildman, Mate, of whom he speaks highly. Seeing his position, I immediately ordered the ships and steamers named in the margin,* who were within range with their 10-inch guns, as well as the French mortars on shore, which had been playing on them some time, to give them a shot and shell every five minutes ; and their fire was so well directed that the enemy held out a flag of truce.

2. I sent Captain Hall (of the Bulldog) on shore, who was shortly joined by Admiral Parseval's Aide-de-Camp and two of General Baraguay d'Hilliers's Staff, and the troops in the fortress agreed to lay down their arms and march out.

3. After I had landed I was joined by the French Admiral and the Commander-in-Chief of the Army ; the prisoners (about 2,000 I believe) were marched out and embarked in steamers, and proceeded to Led Sund, to Commodore the Honourable Frederick Grey, who will conduct them to the Downs to await further orders.

4. I beg to congratulate their Lordships on the fall of this important fortress, which will be followed by the submission of the Garden of Islands, with so small a loss ; and I am happy to say the greatest cordiality has subsisted between the French General and Admiral and myself, as well as between the soldiers and sailors of the two Nations.

5. As soon as I can collect a list of the stores surrendered, it shall be forwarded to their Lordships, and a Commissary has been named for that purpose.

Edinburgh ; Ajax ; Arrogant ; Amphion ; Valorous ; Sphynx ; Driver.

6. This despatch will be delivered by my Flag Lieutenant (Lieutenant John de Courcy Agnew), whom I beg to recommend to their Lordships for promotion.

I have, &c.,

(Signed) CHARLES NAPIER,
Vice-Admiral and Commander-in-Chief.

The Secretary of the Admiralty.

ADMIRALTY, August 23, 1854,

The following ADDITIONAL DESPATCH has been received from Vice-Admiral Sir Charles Napier, K. C. B., detailing operations connected with the fall of the Fortress of Bomarsund :—

No. 340.
SIR,

*Bulldog, off Bomarsund,
August 11, 1854.*

By the last mail I informed their Lordships of the arrival and debarkation of the troops ; I now beg to acquaint you that on Wednesday morning, the 9th instant, the troops were in position, both to the north and south, and the western battery of the enemy completely invested.

2. It was now time to land the guns, and as we had no horses it was necessary to employ the ships' companies instead. Enclosed is a copy of the order I gave to Rear-Admiral Chads, and his report of proceedings.

3. There were many instances last war of guns being placed in extraordinary positions, but I do not believe that in any one case such difficulties were overcome as in the present instance.

4. The moving of the guns was under the command of Captain Hewlett, of the Edinburgh ; but Admiral Chads, with his usual activity, was there to cheer them on, and indeed all the Captains occasionally gave the benefit of their presence to the men employed on this hard and fatiguing service.

I have, &c.,

(Signed) CHAS. NAPIER,
Vice-Admiral and Commander-in-Chief.

The Secretary of the Admiralty.

Enclosure No. 1, in Sir Charles Napier's Letter,
No. 340.

*Bulldog, off Bomarsund,
August 9, 1854.*

(Memorandum.)

I WISH as many thirty-two pounder guns as General Jones may require, to be landed from the Belleisle, and conveyed to him.

Having the fullest reliance on your skill and exertions to perform this difficult and important service I shall give you no other instructions than to get them there.

If the portion of your squadron now here is not sufficient, you shall have what further assistance as is in my power to give you.

(Signed) CHAS. NAPIER,
Vice-Admiral.

Rear-Admiral H. D. Chads, C.B., H.M.S. Edinburgh.

Enclosure No. 2, in Sir Charles Napier's Letter,
No. 340.

No. 18.
SIR,

*Edinburgh, off Bomarsund,
August 12, 1854.*

In obedience to your directions to give every aid from the four ships of my squadron named in the margin*, to Brigadier-General Jones, to form a breaching battery, I consulted with that officer, who proposed to compose his battery of six thirty-two pounders of 42 cwt., which guns you had forwarded in the Belleisle, when the following operations were undertaken.

Each ship having previously prepared two sledges, after a pattern made by Captain Ramsay, for dragging the guns, four were landed on the morning of the 10th, to convey three guns and the carriages and the gear, with 150 men to each sledge, under their respective senior lieutenants, the whole being under the command of Captain Hewlett, of my flag ship, encouraged occasionally by their own captains.

The situation selected for the battery from the landing-place was four and a half miles distant, over execrable ground, the greatest portion of steep rocky hills and ploughed fields.

At five o'clock the boats left the ships, erected shears, landed the guns, and had them in the General's camp by one o'clock; the exertions and good will of the officers and seamen created much astonishment in the encampment of the French troops, who cheered them in passing, and on some of the most difficult ascents went in voluntarily and most cheerfully to the drag-ropes, and gave their assistance.

On arriving in camp the men were much exhausted, and laid down to rest, and prepare their dinners, when an order arrived that they were to embark immediately, as the Penelope was on shore under the fire of the enemy, and their ships might be required; the order was received with cheers, and forgetting dinners and fatigue they rushed down to their boats in three quarters of an hour by a short route, but close under the enemy's fire.

On the next morning the same number of guns were landed, but on this occasion, with 200 men from each ship,—as the parties the previous evening were much fatigued,—these guns were in the camp by 10.30.

The bands of the ships attended the parties, and the whole march was one of triumph over difficulties that previously had been considered almost insurmountable; the spirits of the men were occasionally excited by a dropping shot from the enemy.

It is unnecessary for me to expatiate on the merits of Captain Hewlett, the officers, and seamen, in performing this arduous service, but to express my admiration of their great zeal and perseverance, as from personal observation on the spot you will have formed your own judgment.

I have, &c.,

Rear-Admiral, &c.

Vice-Admiral Sir Charles Napier, K.C.B.

Enclosure No. 3, in Sir Charles Napier's Letter,
No. 340.

Bulldog, off Bomarsund,
August 12, 1854.

(Memorandum.)

THE Commander-in-Chief begs to convey to Rear-Admiral Chads his admiration of the great exertion made by Captain Hewlett, the officers and men employed in landing and transporting six thirty-two pounders to General Jones's camp, a distance of four miles and a half. The Commander-in-Chief, in the course of his service, has seen guns moved in difficult places, but never on such roads and to such a distance as in the present instance. The cheerfulness and exertions of the men were wonderful, nor must it be forgotten when the Penelope got on shore under the enemy's battery, and it was probable they might be wanted on board their ships, regardless of their fatigue, they abandoned their dinner and hurried down to their boats to embark and render assistance to the Penelope in distress.

(Signed) CHAS. NAPIER,
Vice-Admiral and Commander-in-Chief.
