Captain Commanding Naval Brigade.

The Military Secretary to H. E. Lord Raglan, Commander-in-Chief.

Before Sevastopol,

MY LORD, May 26, 1855.

I HAVE the honour to enclose the Fortnight Confidential Reports of the Generals of Division and Brigade to the 20th instant.

I have likewise to transmit for your Lordship's information a letter from the Inspector-General of Hospitals, shewing the extent of the cholera to the latest period.

I earnestly hope that the disease is not gaining ground.

I have, &c.

RAGLAN.

The Lord Panmure, &c., &c., &c.

Enclosure.

Before Sevastopol,

MY LORD, May 26, 1855.

I HAVE the honour to enclose a Return of the daily progress of Cholera in the Army in the Crimea, from 19th to 25th May inclusive.

Your Lordship will notice by this Return that the disease has moderated in violence, and that the mortality is one-third less than it was during the preceding seven days, though I cannot say that the number of attacks has diminished in proportion, or that the disease has been circumscribed by narrower limits; on the contrary, I think it, if anything, more generally diffused, as cases have occurred in every Division.

At Balaklava several admissions into the General Hospital there have taken place from the Sardinian Contingent, from the Land Transport Corps, and from ships in the harbour, which have swelled out our lists of both admissions and deaths.

The removal of the Buffs and 48th Regiment to higher and drier ground has been attended with good results.

Great attention is paid to the sanitary condition of the camps, and to all matters that it is thought may tend to excite the disease.

The attention of medical officers has been drawn to the subject of cholera belts, and I have reason
