WAR-DEPARTMENT, July 18, 1855.

LORD PANMURE has this day received a Despatch and its Enclosures, of which the following are copies, addressed to his Lordship by Lieutenant-General Simpson, Commanding Her Majesty's Forces in the East.

*Before Sevastopol,
July 7, 1855.*

MY LORD,

I HAVE the honour to acquaint your Lordship that the remains of our late lamented Commander-in-Chief, Field-Marshal Lord Raglan, were removed from Head-quarters to Kazatch Bay, on Tuesday the 3d instant, and placed on board Her Majesty's ship "Caradoc," which departed for England that same evening.

Nothing could be more imposing than the whole line of this melancholy procession. The day was fine, and the appearance of the Allied troops splendid; as many as could be spared from duty in the trenches, and with safety to their camp, were collected, and the procession moved from the door of this house exactly at four o'clock P.M., in the following order:—

In the court-yard of the house was stationed a guard of honour of one hundred men of the Grenadier Guards, with their drums and regimental colours; fifty men, with one field officer, one captain, and one subaltern, from the Royal Sappers and Miners, and from each regiment, lined the road from the British to the French Head-quarters, a distance of about a mile; a squadron of cavalry was stationed on the right of the line, two batteries of artillery and a squadron of cavalry on the left of it; the infantry were commanded by Major-General Eyre, C.B.

The road from the French Head-quarters to Kazatch Bay was lined throughout the whole way by the infantry of the French Imperial Guard, and of the 1st Corps; bands were stationed at intervals, and played as the procession passed, and field batteries (French) at intervals, on the high grounds right and left of the road, fired minute guns.

The procession to escort the body was as follows:—

Two squadrons British Cavalry (12th Lancers.)

Two squadrons Piedmontese Light Cavalry.

Four squadrons French Chasseurs d'Afrique (1st and 4th Regiments).

Four squadrons French Cuirassiers (2d and 9th Regiments).

Two troops French Horse Artillery.

Major Brandling's troop Horse Artillery.

The coffin, covered with a black pall, fringed with white silk, and the Union Jack, and surmounted by the late Field-Marshal's cocked hat and sword, and a garland of "Immortels," placed there by General Pelissier, was carried on a platform, fixed upon a 9-pounder gun, drawn by horses of Captain Thomas's troop Royal Horse Artillery.

At the wheels of the gun-carriage rode General Pelissier, Commander-in-Chief of the French Army, His Highness Omer Pacha, Commander-in-Chief of the Ottoman Army, General Della Marmora, Commander-in-Chief of the Sardinian Army, and Lieutenant-General Simpson, Commander-in-Chief of the English Army.

Charger of the late Field-Marshal, led by two mounted orderlies.

Relations and Personal Staff of the late Field-Marshal.

Generals and other Officers of the French, Sardinian, and Turkish Armies—a large number of whom attended.

British Commissioners to Foreign Armies.

British General Officers and their Staffs.

Staff of Head-quarters.

One Officer of each Regiment of Cavalry and Infantry, Royal Sappers and Miners, and Land Transport Corps; two from the Naval Brigade, Royal Marines, Medical and Commissariat Staff; and three from the Royal Artillery.

Personal escorts of the Allied Commanders-in-Chief.

The personal escort of the late Field-Marshal, (Captain Chetwode's troop of the 8th Hussars).

A field battery of the Royal Artillery.

Two squadrons of British Cavalry (4th Dragoon Guards).

Detachment of Mounted Staff Corps.

The escort was under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel Dupuis, Royal Horse Artillery.

Two field batteries of the Royal Artillery, stationed on the hill opposite the house, fired a salute of nineteen guns when the procession moved off.

The united bands of the 3d, 9th, and 62d Regiments, stationed in the vineyard that surrounds the house, played the Dead March.

The band of the Sardinian Grenadiers was stationed half way to the French Head-quarters, and the band of the 10th Hussars on the left of the line.

The approach to the wharf at Kazatch Bay was lined by detachments of the Royal Marines and sailors.

The body was received on the wharf by Admiral Bruat and Rear-Admiral Stewart, C.B., and a large number of officers of the combined fleets. The launch of the British flag ship, towed by man-of-war boats, conveyed the coffin to the "Caradoc," the boats of the combined fleets forming an escort; and the troop and battery of the Royal Artillery included in the escort, formed upon the rising ground above the bay, and fired a salute of nineteen guns as the coffin left the shore.

Everything was well conducted, and no accident occurred.

Thus terminated the last honours that could be paid by his troops to their beloved commander. His loss to us here is inexpressible, and will, I am sure, be equally felt by his country at home. The sympathy of our Allies is universal and sincere. His name and memory are all that remain to animate us in the difficulties and dangers to which we may be called.

I have, &c.,

JAMES SIMPSON,
Lieutenant-General Commanding.

The Lord Panmure, &c., &c., &c.

ADMIRALTY, July 16, 1855.

DESPATCHES, of which the following are Copies or Extracts, have been this day received from Rear-Admiral the Honourable R. S. Dundas, Commander-in-Chief of Her Majesty's Ships and Vessels in the Baltic.

Duke of Wellington,Tolboukin Lighthouse, July 7, 1855.

"THE Magicienne returned this morning from Lovisa, and I annex a Report which I have received from Captain Yelverton, of Her Majesty's ship Arrogant, who has been again successful in destroying a well-constructed fort at Svartholm, in the entrance of the Bay of Lovisa, but their Lordships will observe with regret that notwithstanding the humane desire of that officer, the town of Lovisa was unfortunately destroyed by fire, which occurred accidentally on the night following the visit of Her Majesty's ships. Captain Vansittart informs me that the authorities of the town have themselves admitted and explained the accidental origin of the fire."

Her Majesty's ship Arrogant, Off Hogland, July 8, 1855.

SIR,
I HAVE the honour to inform you that I reached Lovisa on the afternoon of the 4th instant, and anchored the vessels close to Fort Svartholm.

The enemy must have had intelligence of our movements, and quitted the fort on our approach, for they had been at work but a few hours before unroofing the barracks and taking away stores. The guns and ammunition had been previously removed.

Svartholm was in good condition, and a work of great strength, entirely commanding the approaches to Lovisa; it has had important additions of late years, can mount 122 guns, and had accommodation, in casemated barracks, for about 1,000 men, with governor's house and garden, and excellent officers' quarters. I made immediate arrangements for blowing up the fort and completely destroying the barracks; these have since been fully carried out.

On the 5th I made a reconnaissance of the town of Lovisa, in the Ruby, accompanied by the boats of the Arrogant and Magicienne. A strong detachment of Cossacks made their appearance at one time, but they were dispersed by the fire from the boats, the rockets particularly throwing them into great confusion. On landing at Lovisa, I sent for the authorities and explained the object of my visit; some demur was caused by our not having a flag of truce. I told them they had no right to such a guarantee, as the respect due to it had been so grossly violated at Hangö. I then proceeded to the barracks and Government stores within the town, which I destroyed, but did not set fire to them, as by so doing the whole town must have been burnt.

This precaution was not destined to save Lovisa, for during the night an accidental fire occurred in a portion of the town where we had not been, and before morning the whole place was reduced to ashes.

I have, &c.,

(Signed) H. R. YELVERTON, Captain.
Rear-Admiral the Hon. R. S. Dundas, Commander-in-Chief.

Extract of a Letter from Rear-Admiral Honourable R. S. Dundas to the Secretary of the Admiralty, dated—

Duke of Wellington, Tolboukin Lighthouse, July 7, 1855.

I CANNOT conclude this letter without calling the particular attention of their Lordships to the active exertions of Captain Storey, of Her Majesty's ship Harrier, which led a few days later to the destruction of a large amount of shipping, discovered afterwards in another anchorage near Nystad, as detailed in the enclosure to Captain Warden's Report of the 2d instant.

*Harrier, off Little Wahas,
June 24, 1855.*

SIR,
I HAVE the honour to inform you that the boats of this ship destroyed 47 ships belonging to the enemy, varying from 700 tons to 200 tons, on the nights of the 23d and 24th instant.

On the first night the ships destroyed were one mile from the town of Nystad, and about three miles from the ship, and we were enabled to bring one barque, the Victoria, of about 450 tons, off with us.

On the following morning the steam was got up and we proceeded to sea to anchor the prize off Enskov Lighthouse.

At 5 P.M., however, we steamed towards the land, and anchored at about 7.30 P.M., and at 8 P.M. the boats were again despatched.

During the night and following day we discovered 42 ships, the whole of which we either burnt or scuttled.

I have the greatest pleasure in being able to state that these proceedings were so successfully carried out without any casualty.

Owing to the distance we got away from the ship (10 or 11 miles) and the blowing weather, accompanied with rain, that came on during the morning, we were prevented from bringing any vessel out with us.

We did not get back to the ship until after 6 P.M. this afternoon, the men having been on their oars twenty-two hours.

I think, Sir, I am only doing common justice to the men, when I state how pleased I was to see the zeal and perseverance with which they worked for so many hours, neither can I omit stating my belief that that arose in a great measure from the good example of the officers, especially the senior Lieutenant, Mr Annesley, from whom I have ever received the most active assistance.

Having then, in two following nights and one day, destroyed the whole of the Nystad shipping (probably upwards of 20,000 tons), I trust these proceedings will meet with your approval.

I have, &c.,

Commander.
