WAR-DEPARTMENT, September 3, 1855.

LORD PANMURE has this day received a Despatch and its Enclosures, of which the following are Copies, addressed to his Lordship by General Simpson :—

Before Sevastopol,

August 21, 1855.

MY LORD,

IN my Despatch of the 18th instant I was unable to give as detailed an account of the part taken by the Sardinian troops in the Battle of the Tchernaya as I could have wished. I have since received General La Marmora's report, of which I have now the honour to send you a copy.

The Killed and Wounded of the Russian Army exceed, if anything, the number I originally stated. An armistice was granted to enable the enemy to bury the dead, and vast quantities were carried away.

The fire from the batteries of the Allies has been very effective, and the result attained has been sufficient to enable the works against the place to progress satisfactorily.

I beg to enclose the List of Casualties to the 19th instant.

Major McGowan, 93d Highlanders, who was reported by me as missing in my Despatch of the 11th August, I have since ascertained was attacked whilst posting his sentries in advance of the trenches, wounded severely, and made prisoner.

I have, &c.,

JAMES SIMPSON,

General Commanding.

The Lord Panmure, &c., &c., &c.

Enclosure 1.—Translation.

SARDINIAN ARMY.—Head-Quarters of the Expeditionary Forces in the East, Kadikoi, August 17, 1855.

SIR,

THE interest which you are so kind as to evince in everything relating to the Sardinian Expeditionary Army makes it imperative upon me to inform your Excellency of the share taken by the troops under my command in the engagement on the Tchernaya yesterday.

Upon receiving the report of Colonel Dessaint, attached to the French head-quarters, which you were good enough to communicate to me on the evening of the day before yesterday, and by which we were led to expect very shortly an attack on the line of the Tchernaya, I at once gave orders that my troops should be under arms yesterday morning at an earlier hour than usual.

At break of day our outposts stationed on the Mamelon which commands Tchorgoun were enveloped in a well-sustained fire of artillery, which proceeded from three batteries posted opposite to the breastworks by which our outposts were covered, and on the two Mamelons further to the right, which form the two banks of the Souliou. They were at the same time vigorously charged by three Russian columns, which came on with fixed bayonets, and attacked our breastworks in front and rear. The men composing these columns carried ladders with them to scale the parapets. The preconcerted signal of alarm was immediately given; and the troops took up the positions which had been assigned to them in anticipation of this attack.

I begged his Excellency Hosman Pasha to bring up the Turkish troops which were stationed furthest off; and I ordered the 4th battalion of Riflemen (Bersaglieri) to the support of our outposts, which only consisted of three companies, in order that these latter might be enabled to hold their ground as long as possible, and thus give us time to complete our arrangements.

Attacked in the rear by the enemy's artillery, and charged by three columns of infantry, the outposts, after an hour's firing, fell back, the reinforcements I had sent to them greatly facilitating their retreat.

At the same time I made every effort to silence the enemy's guns. In this endeavour I was assisted by the Turkish field-pieces from Alson, and by the English battery, with which you were good enough to reinforce us. Several of the enemy's ammunition waggons exploded between seven and eight o'clock.

In the meantime the Russians had stationed fresh batteries near the centre of their position, and had opened a most effective fire of artillery on the tête-de-pont at Tractir, and on the French positions on our left. A column of infantry, under cover of this fire, attacked the Mamelon, which formed the extreme right of General D'Herbillon's division. This first column had crossed the Tchernaya, and surmounted the steep ascent of the Mamelon in spite of the fire of the tirailleurs, when it was vigorously attacked by the French troops in support, and hurled back, broken and disordered, into the Tchernaya.

As I considered, from the subsequent dispositions of the enemy's forces, that he only intended to make a demonstration of artillery before our position, while he concentrated his infantry chiefly on the extreme right of the Third Division (Faucher's), on which point a second column was now advancing, I ordered a portion of my 5th Brigade, under the command of General Mallard, to march to the support of the right wing of the French, and I posted two of our batteries in a position from whence they could maintain an oblique fire upon the Russians. At the same time I requested the English cavalry to move down into the plain to be in readiness to charge. I had given similar orders to my own cavalry.

When the soldiers of my 5th Brigade arrived at the Mamelon they found that the enemy's attack had been already repulsed; but the fire of the two batteries of the 2d Division (Troth's) appeared to do great execution on the 2d Russian column, which, checked in front by the French troops, and harassed in the rear by the fire of our batteries and the musquetry of our battalions, fell back in the greatest disorder. I then ordered some of our battalions to advance under cover of the Riflemen (Bersaglieri), but I was requested to countermand this movement.

The enemy repulsed at all points commenced his retreat. One column, which appeared to me to consist of a division, retreated by the valley of the Souliou. Another division, the one which had attacked our outposts and the French right in the morning, fell back upon the zig-zag Mamelon; while a third division followed the road which leads to Mackenzie's Farm.

I took advantage of this state of things to reoccupy with my troops the zig-zag Mamelon; in which design I succeeded perfectly, in spite of the imposing force which the enemy still retained on that point. In the meantime three battalions of Turkish troops advanced into the Valley of Tchorgoun, to replace the battalion of Cialdini's brigade, which was occupying the heights of Karlooka.

Later in the day, I crossed the Tchernaya with four squadrons, and marching in a parallel line with the zig-zag Mamelon, came upon the old Russian Redoubt, whence I could easily discern, at a little distance before us, a very fine array of regular cavalry, supported by horse artillery. It was distributed in twelve separate bodies, and must have been composed of at least fifty squadrons. This cavalry did not fall back on Mackenzie's road till the whole of the infantry and artillery had effected their retreat.

The losses sustained by our troops, a portion only of whom was engaged, were very inconsiderable. They amount to about two hundred men placed "hors de combat;" and I impute the fact of our not having lost more men mainly to the works with which we fortified our position, and to the batteries of heavy guns which you were so obliging as to lend us for their defence. It is, however, my painful duty to announce to your Excellency that Count Montevecchio, the General commanding the Fourth Brigade, is mortally wounded; a ball passed through his chest.

Pray accept, General, the assurance of my high consideration.

The General Commanding-in-Chief
the Sardinian Expeditionary Forces.

(Signed) LA MARMORA.

To His Excellency the General Commanding-in-Chief the English Army.

WAR-DEPARTMENT, September 5, 1855.

LORD PANMURE has this day received a Despatch and its Enclosures, of which the following are Copies, addressed to his Lordship by General Simpson :—

*Before Sevastopol,
August 25, 1855.*

MY LORD,

HAVING been engaged since daylight in a careful observation of the position in front of Balaklava, I am unable to address your Lordship at any length this day.

The enemy have been concentrating troops at the Mackenzie, Tasova, and Karales, their left extending as far as the Village of Makoul, and are supposed to have received considerable reinforcements, which probably consist of two divisions of Grenadiers, which have been conveyed in carts from Bakshiserai and Simpheropol.

The bridge across the Great Harbour is nearly completed, and large bodies of men are employed in erecting earthworks on the north side of the harbour. Intrenchments have been thrown up on the Sievernaya Hill, extending from the sea coast to the site of the first light-house, facing the north.

From various sources we learn that the Russians on the right bank of the Tchernaya are held in perfect readiness for an offensive movement.

Our siege operations progress steadily, with, I regret to say, heavy casualties on our side, as your Lordship will see by the accompanying lists.

I have, &c.,

JAMES SIMPSON,
General Commanding.

The Lord Panmure, &c., &c., &c.

ADMIRALTY, September 4, 1855.

DESPATCHES, of which the following are Copies, have been received at the Admiralty from Rear-Admiral the Honourable R. S. Dundas, Commander-in-Chief of Her Majesty's ships and vessels in the Baltic :—

No. 431.
SIR,

Duke of Wellington,
in Nargen, August 27, 1855.

I HAVE the honour to transmit, for the information of the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, a letter from Captain Warden, of Her Majesty's ship Ajax, enclosing a report detailing the proceedings of Captain Henry C. Otter, in Her Majesty's ship Firefly, before Brandon, the sea-port of Wasa, in the Gulf of Bothnia, which are highly creditable to that officer, and to the officers and crew under his command; and I beg leave to recommend to the favourable notice of their Lordships the gallant conduct of Lieutenants Edward Burstal and John Ward, as well as that of Mr

John A. Bull, Second Master, and Mr James W. Salter, the Gunner, on the occasion.

I have, &c.,
(Signed) R. S. DUNDAS, Rear-Admiral
and Commander-in-Chief.

The Secretary of the Admiralty.

No. 34.
SIR,

Ajax, in Fogle Fiord,
August 22, 1855.

I HAVE the honour to lay before you the accompanying report of Captain Otter, of the Firefly, of his proceedings between the 27th July and 11th instant, at Brandon, in the neighbourhood of Wasa, whilst temporarily occupying that part of the station, together with a list of vessels taken, and property and vessels otherwise destroyed; and I desire to draw your favorable notice to this report, as it bears witness to the zeal and energy of Captain Otter in the performance of this service. I have, &c.,

(Signed) FRED. WARDEN.

Rear-Admiral The Hon. R. S. Dundas, C.B.,
&c., &c., &c.

SIR,
Her Majesty's Ship Firefly,
Korsoren Beacon, August 11, 1855.

I BEG to acquaint you that after leaving Fogle Fiord on the 27th ultimo, I communicated with Her Majesty's ship Harrier, and His Imperial Majesty's corvette D'Assas, on their stations, and on the evening of the 31st despatched Her Majesty's ship Driver to you from Noorskar Light. At 10 A.M. on 1st August I anchored Her Majesty's ship Firefly half a mile outside of Korsoren Beacon, and with the two paddle-box boats and the gig, accompanied by Lieutenant Ward and Mr Bull, pushed on to the south-east; on our way we got information of a large barque at anchor to the eastward of Wasklöt, and also that there was a military force in the neighbourhood.

On arriving within two miles from Brandon, a telegraph was observed on a small island in Korsham Fiord, signaling with three large balls, and on pulling in towards it, two men in a boat pushed off from the land with a flag of truce; fortunately I did not fire, for the flag was so large I mistook it for the boat's mainsail, and concluded they were trying to escape.

This very improper opportunity of using a flag of truce could not be recognised, and I ordered the telegraph to be cut down, but released the men and their boat.

No time was now to be lost, as the signal had been answered from the main; I therefore pushed on with all expedition, and on rounding the E. point of Wasklöt observed the object of our search in the mud, which, with little difficulty, was got off, and towed out of range of any guns that could be brought to bear. The prize proved to be the Vides, of 300 tons, with from 200 to 300 casks of tar on board.

At midnight two Russian deserters came on board, and stated the troops had moved off to Wasa on seeing the boats approaching, thinking an attack was contemplated on that place.

At 8.30 A.M., 2d August, I returned to the Firefly, and immediately got under weigh for Korsoran Fiord, but the navigation was so difficult that it was not until 5.30 P.M. I came alongside the prize. At 8.30 P.M. I weighed and proceeded towards Brandon, the seaport of Wasa, and a great ship-building place; it had immense magazines on an island, separated by a very narrow deep water channel from the town, with a custom house and barracks.

At midnight, anchored within 400 yards of the town, and sprung the broadside to enfilade the channel and protect the boats, which were sent under Lieutenant Ward to examine the magazines. Some of them were opened, and found to be empty; others contained coal, tar, resin, salt, spars, anchors and cables, boats, salt fish, hawsers, and numerous piles of 3-inch deals, but no sails or rigging, as we were led to expect. On a few of the principal inhabitants joining us on the island, they were told that the sails of the barque must be given up, and they immediately sent to Wasa to Mr Wolf, a wealthy merchant and shipowner, but he refused. I therefore determined to burn the magazines; but as the wind was blowing directly on the town, I agreed to wait a reasonable time until a change took place, and gave the inhabitants notice that they were at liberty to remove anything from the island that belonged to them, except ship's stores; for this forbearance they expressed themselves very grateful.

Towards the afternoon Lieutenant Burstal brought in a schooner, and reported having discovered two fine barques and two brigs in a creek a mile and a half distant.

As the wind was still on the shore, and the destruction of the town inevitable had the magazines been fired, I directed the schooner to be hauled close in to the island, and a working party to put some casks of tar and deals into her. Everything had the appearance of security; ladies were walking about the beach, parties of pleasure sailing round the ship, and the people employed taking their property from the island.

At 8 P.M. I landed to communicate with the First Lieutenant, and had just visited the sentry placed on a building platform, when a heavy fire of musketry from different parts of the town was opened upon the working party and the ship, and was immediately replied to by the latter with shot and shell, which appears to have done great execution.

The deck of the schooner was so enfiladed that it was impossible to get on board for the arms, and had it been practicable to do so not a man could be seen from her to fire at. Providentially all escaped on board uninjured, and Mr Bull having returned in the paddle-box boats, with a fine barque in tow, a fire from the four guns and rifles was kept up, so hot, that in about an hour and-a-half the fusillade from the shore nearly ceased.

At midnight I moved the ship into a better position for sinking the schooner, and the bows being nearly driven in by the shot, I proceeded to the destruction of the barque and two brigs before the enemy could rescue them; this was successfully performed with the assistance of the Second Master, Mr Bull, and Mr Salter, Gunner.

It was ascertained afterwards, from two different sources, that the enemy had 25 killed, and from 4 to 18 wounded; the injury appears to have been inflicted chiefly by the first three shots, whilst the troops were drawn up abreast of the ship.

On our side I am thankful to report that no more serious casualties occurred than a man and a boy being struck with spent balls.

During the 6th and 7th the weather was so wet and boisterous that it was impossible to act against the enemy, but I ascertained during the night that reinforcements had arrived to the amount of 200 or 300 sharpshooters and cossacks, with several guns.

On the morning of the 8th, the weather being moderate, I took up a position 1,500 yards from the magazine, and the same distance from a battery of four guns, and opened fire upon the latter, which, not being returned, I commenced firing red-hot shot at the magazines.

At 2:30 P.M. smoke began to issue from the houses, and Lieutenant Ward, having volunteered to try and cut out the schooner, pushed in with paddle-box boat, and with great gallantry drove the soldiers three times out of the woods, but ultimately was obliged to retire before an overwhelming force secreted in the Custom-house; the boat was struck in many places, but I am thankful to say not a man hurt.

At 8 P.M. the principal magazines being all in a blaze and their destruction inevitable, I closed the battery to 1,000 yards, but still receiving no return (though both guns and soldiers could be seen), and the ammunition nearly expended, I was backing out, when suddenly several heavy guns, from an elevated position masked by trees, opened fire, chiefly with shells, and at the same time the whole force of Riflemen,—and the power of these weapons may be imagined when I mention that a ball cut through a spar on the bridge, two inches thick, at a distance of 1,500 yards.

It is with the greatest pleasure I have to speak of the coolness of the officers and men at this trying juncture; the narrowness of the channel and shoalness of the water (at the most  $2\frac{3}{4}$  fathoms), rendered it injudicious to attempt turning the Firefly round, and she was slowly backed astern  $1\frac{1}{4}$  miles, before she was out of range, an evolution which, from the lightness of the wind, was not performed under 40 minutes.

I cannot conclude without mentioning how much I am indebted to the First Lieutenant, Mr Edw. Burstal, who so materially assisted in inflicting this serious blow on the enemy's property.

I have, &c.,

(Signed) HENRY C. OTTER,

Captain.
