WAR-DEPARTMENT, September 21, 1855.

LORD PANMURE has this day received a Despatch and its Enclosures, of which the following are Copies, addressed to his Lordship by General Simpson :—

My Lord, Before Sevastopol, September 8, 1855.

At daylight on the 5th instant, the batteries of the Allied Armies opened a steady and continuous fire against the enemy's works.

During the night one of the vessels, supposed to be a frigate, stationed on the north side of the harbour, was set on fire by, it is believed, a shell from a French battery in their right attack. The frigate, during the 6th, 7th, and up to the present moment, has continued uninterrupted, and but feebly responded to by the Russians.

Another frigate was discovered yesterday afternoon to be on fire, and has been entirely destroyed.

From the length of time it continued burning, it is supposed to have contained stores.

About eleven o'clock last night a heavy explosion took place, but I have not as yet been able to ascertain in which part of the enemy's works.

I beg to enclose the List of Casualties to the 6th instant.

I have, &c.,
JAMES SIMPSON,
General Commanding.

The Lord Panmure, &c., &c., &c.

HENRY KEPPEL,
Captain Commanding Royal Naval Brigade.

WAR-DEPARTMENT, September 22, 1855.

MAJOR the Honourable Leicester Curzon arrived this Morning with a Despatch from General Simpson to Lord Panmure, of which the following is a copy :—

Before Sevastopol, September 9, 1855.

MY LORD,

I HAD the honour to apprise your Lordship in my Despatch of the 4th instant, that the Engineer and Artillery Officers of the Allied Armies had laid before General Pelissier and myself a report recommending that the assault should be given on the 8th instant, after a heavy fire had been kept up for three days.

This arrangement I agreed to, and I have to congratulate your Lordship on the glorious results of the attack of yesterday, which has ended in the possession of the town, dockyards, and public buildings, and destruction of the last ships of the Russian Fleet in the Black Sea. Three steamers alone remain, and the speedy capture or sinking of these must speedily follow.

It was arranged that at twelve o'clock in the day the French columns of assault were to leave their trenches, and take possession of the Malakoff and adjacent works. After their success had been assured, and they were fairly established, the Redan was to be assaulted by the English; the Bastion, Central, and Quarantine Forts, on the left, were simultaneously to be attacked by the French.

At the hour appointed our Allies quitted their trenches, entered and carried the apparently impregnable defences of the Malakoff with that impetuous valour which characterizes the French attack; and having once obtained possession, they were never dislodged.

The Tricolour planted on the parapet was the signal for our troops to advance.

The arrangements for the attack I entrusted to Lieutenant-General Sir William Codrington, who carried out the details in concert with Lieutenant-General Markham.

I determined that the second and light Divisions should have the honour of the assault, from the circumstance of their having defended the batteries and approaches against the Redan for so many months, and from the intimate knowledge they possessed of the ground.

The fire of our artillery having made as much of a breach as possible in the salient of the Redan, I decided that the columns of assault should be directed against that part, as being less exposed to the heavy flanking fire by which this work is protected.

It was arranged between Sir W. Codrington and Lieutenant-General Markham that the assaulting column of 1,000 men should be formed by equal numbers of these two Divisions, the column of the light Division to lead, that of the second to follow. They left the trenches at the pre-concerted signal, and moved across the ground preceded by a covering party of 200 men, and a ladder party of 320. On arriving at the crest of the ditch, and the ladders placed, the men immediately stormed the parapet of the Redan, and penetrated into the salient angle. A most determined and bloody contest was here maintained for nearly an hour, and, although supported to the utmost, and the greatest bravery displayed; it was found impossible to maintain the position.

Your Lordship will perceive by the long and sad list of casualties, with what gallantry and self-devotion the officers so nobly placed themselves at the head of their men during this sanguinary conflict.

I feel myself unable to express in adequate terms the sense I entertain of the conduct and gallantry exhibited by the troops, though their devotion was not rewarded by the success which they so well merited, but to no one are my thanks more justly due than to Colonel Windham, who gallantly headed his column of attack, and was fortunate in entering and remaining with the troops, during the contest.

The trenches were, subsequently to this attack, so crowded with troops that I was unable to organize a second assault, which I intended to make with the Highlanders under Lieutenant-General Sir Colin Campbell, who had hitherto formed the reserve, to be supported by the third Division under Major-General Sir William Eyre. I therefore sent for these officers, and arranged with them to renew the attack the following morning.

The Highland Brigade occupied the advanced trenches during the night. About eleven o'clock the enemy commenced exploding their magazines, and Sir Colin Campbell having ordered a small party to advance cautiously to examine the Redan, found the work abandoned. He did not, however, deem it necessary to occupy it until daylight.

The evacuation of the town by the enemy was made manifest during the night. Great fires appeared in every part, accompanied by large explosions, under the cover of which the enemy succeeded in withdrawing their troops to the north side by means of the raft-bridge recently constructed, and which they afterwards disconnected and conveyed to the other side.

Their men-of-war were all sunk during the night.

The boisterous weather rendered it altogether impossible for the Admirals to fulfil their intention of bringing the broadsides of the Allied Fleets to bear upon the Quarantine Batteries; but an excellent effect was produced by the animated and well-directed fire of their mortar vessels, those of Her Majesty being under the direction of Captain Wilcox, of the Odin, and Captain Digby, of the Royal Marine Artillery.

It now becomes my pleasing duty, my Lord, to place on record the high sense I entertain of the conduct of this Army since I have had the honour to command it. The hardships and privations endured by many of the Regiments during a long winter campaign are too well known for me to comment upon. They were borne both by officers and men with a patience and uncomplaining endurance worthy of the highest praise, and which gained them the deserved applause and sympathy of their country.

The Naval Brigade, under the command of Captain the Honourable Henry Keppel, aided by Captain Moorsom, and many gallant officers and seamen who have served the guns from the commencement of the siege, merit my warmest thanks.

The prompt, hearty, and efficacious co-operation of Her Majesty's Navy, commanded by Rear-Admiral Sir Edmund Lyons, and ably seconded by Sir Houston Stewart, has contributed most materially to the success of our undertaking; and here perhaps I may be permitted to say that, if it had pleased God that the successful result of this memorable siege should have been reported by my ever to be lamented predecessor in this command, I am sure that it would have been one of his most pleasing duties to express the deep sense which I know he entertained of the invaluable assistance and counsel he received on all occasions from Sir

Edmund Lyons. When at times affairs looked gloomy and success doubtful, he was at hand to cheer and encourage; and every assistance that could tend to advance the operations was given with the hearty good-will which characterizes the British sailor.

Nothing has contributed more to the present undertaking than the cordial co-operation which has so happily existed from the first between the two services.

I cannot sufficiently express my approbation of the conduct of the Royal Engineers under Lieutenant-General Sir Harry Jones, who has conducted the siege operations from the beginning of this year. For some time past he has been suffering on a bed of sickness, but the eventful hour of the assault would not permit him to remain absent. He was conveyed on a litter into the trenches to witness the completion of his arduous undertakings.

My warmest thanks are due to the officers and soldiers of the Royal Artillery under the command of Major-General Sir R. Dacres, who, during the arduous operations of this protracted siege, have so mainly contributed to its ultimate success.

I must beg further to record my thanks for the cordial co-operation and assistance I have received in carrying out the details of the service from the Chief of the Staff, the Adjutant and Quarter-Master-Generals, and General Staff, as well as Generals commanding Divisions and Brigades of this Army.

I must reserve to myself, for the subject of a future Despatch, bringing before your Lordship the particular mention of officers of the various branches of this Army whom I shall beg to recommend to your favourable notice.

I entrust this Despatch to the care of Brevet-Major the Honourable Leicester Curzon, who has been Assistant Military Secretary to my noble predecessor and myself since the commencement of this war, and who will be able to give your Lordship more minute details than the limits of a Despatch will allow. I have, &c.,

JAMES SIMPSON,
General Commanding.

The Lord Panmure, &c., &c., &c.

ADMIRALTY, September 22, 1855.

DESPACHES, of which the following are Copies, have been received from Rear-Admiral Sir Edmund Lyons, Bart., G.C.B., Commander-in-Chief of Her Majesty's Ships and Vessels in the Mediterranean and Black Sea :—

No. 753. Royal Albert, off Sevastopol,
SIR, September 10, 1855.

OF the operations on shore which have produced the successful result of the singular and memorable siege of Sevastopol, Her Majesty's Government will be informed by General Simpson; but it is my duty to report to the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty what has taken place afloat and on the seaboard under my own observation.

It had been arranged by Generals Simpson and Pelissier, Admiral Bruat and myself, that precisely at noon on the 8th instant, the Allied Fleets should open fire upon the Quarantine Batteries that enfiladed the approach of the assaulting columns; but unfortunately the weather, which had been fine for some days, changed on the morning of the attack, and a north-west gale and heavy sea rendered it impossible for any vessels to act upon batteries situated on the lee shore of this exposed roadstead. It will however appear by the enclosed reports from Captain Wilcox, of the Odin, and Captain Digby, of the Royal Marine Artillery, (whom, as well as the Junior Officers mentioned by them, I beg leave particularly to recommend to the favourable consideration of their Lordships,) that the mortar vessels attached to the fleets kept up a very effective fire from their position in the Bay of Strelitzka.

As the day closed, things in the harbour seemed to be in the same state as they were in the morning, but during the night several heavy explosions were heard, and at dawn we observed that the fortifications on the south side were in flames, and that the six remaining ships-of-the-line had been sunk at their moorings, leaving afloat no more of the late Russian Black Sea Fleet than two dismasted corvettes and nine steamers, most of which are very small.

Soon afterwards the enemy were seen retreating across the newly constructed bridge, until the south side of the harbour, on which the naval and military arsenals, the public buildings, and the town of Sevastopol are situated, appeared to be completely evacuated, and then the southern portion of the bridge was hauled over to the north shore.

It is now my pleasing duty to render justice to the admirable conduct of all whom I have had the honour and happiness to command during the last nine months of this arduous struggle, and whose duties I shared in before; for although, with the exception of the Naval Brigade in the camp, whose gallant bearing from the beginning under the command of Sir Stephen Lushington, has been beyond all praise, and never more so than during the last two bombardments, under the command of the Honourable Captain Keppel, it has not fallen to the lot of the Navy on this occasion to perform distinguished deeds of arms such as those of their gallant brethren in the Army; still, whilst straining every nerve, night and day, under very trying circumstances, to supply the means for carrying on the siege, in the glory of which they could not share, the generous cheer of encouragement, unalloyed by envy, has always been heartily given in the day of triumph; nor have sympathy and assistance ever been wanting in the hour of distress and suffering; the same sentiments have pervaded all ranks — captains, officers, seamen, and marines, all agreeing with each other in following, as I believe I have said once before, the excellent example set them by my able second in command and coadjutor Rear-Admiral Houston Stewart.

Perhaps in closing this letter I may be permitted to indulge in the expression of the gratification I feel in reflecting that, under all the circumstances to which it relates, my gallant colleague Vice-Admiral Bruat and I have gone heart and hand together, and that the most perfect understanding and hearty co-operation in the great cause of humanity in which we are all engaged, have invariably prevailed throughout both Fleets.

I am, &c.,

(Signed) EDMUND LYONS,
Rear-Admiral and Commander-in-Chief.

To the Secretary of the Admiralty.

Strelitzka Bay,
September 8, 1855.

SIR,

I HAVE the honour to report that, in pursuance of the orders which I received from you this morning, I opened fire from the mortar vessels at 8:30 A.M. upon the Quarantine Battery, and a general and more rapid fire from noon until 7 P.M. upon the Quarantine Battery and Fort Alexander. The two outward vessels were much exposed to the swell which set into the bay, rendering a large object desirable, and I therefore directed their fire between Artillery Bay and the Bastion de Quarantine, where I had been informed that Russian reserves were placed.

The force of the wind and heavy swell which prevailed were singularly unfavourable to accuracy, and the general satisfactory nature of the firing was due to the ability exercised by the officers of the Royal Marine Artillery who conducted it; and I beg to submit to your notice the names of First Lieutenant Starr, First Lieutenant Hewett, First Lieutenant Brookes, First Lieutenant Festing, and First Lieutenant Pitman, the officers employed.

The non-commissioned officers and gunners also performed their duties in a most satisfactory manner; and I may especially mention the services of Colour-Serjeant Horner, who, in the absence of an officer, undertook the firing of the Firm, mortar vessel.

Owing to the state of the weather, and the smallness of the means at their disposal, the officers in command had to overcome great difficulties in maintaining the position of their vessels; and I beg to be allowed to express my high opinion of the services of Messrs Leet, Creagh, and Pearson, Brent, Hart, and Vaughan (Mates), who so ably performed these duties, and greatly contributed to the success of the firing. I have, &c.

(Signed) G. DIGBY,
Captain Royal Marine Artillery.

Rear-Admiral Sir Edmund Lyons, Bart.,
&c., &c., &c., G.C.B.

Her Majesty's Ship Odin, off Sevastopol,
September 8, 1855.

SIR,

I HAVE the honour to acquaint you that, acting in pursuance of your directions, and in conjunction with Captain Bachm, commanding four French mortar-vessels, you did me the honour of placing under my command till 7 P.M. against the Quarantine Fort and outworks, as well as upon Fort Alexander and the Upper Bastions (where, near to the latter place, a large number of the enemy's reserve were posted), keeping their fire so completely under that only a few shot and shell were returned, and but few fired into the French battery and advanced works before us. A small number of carcasses were also successfully thrown into the town and upper bastion, which produced a conflagration of some extent.

To Captain Digby, Royal Marine Artillery, and the Artillery Officer in each vessel, I must attribute the successful practice, and I am glad of the opportunity of bringing to your notice the indefatigable and zealous conduct of Mr H. K. Leet, Mate, in charge of the Firm, who, from being senior officer of the mortar vessels, has always ably carried out my instructions; and I am happy to bear testimony to the praiseworthy conduct of Messrs J. B. Creagh, T. L. Pearson, H. W. Brent, A. F. Hart, and Henry Vaughan, Mates, in charge of the other mortar vessels.

I have also great pleasure in stating that no casualty occurred, and that neither the mortars nor vessels were at all damaged by the heavy firing.

I have, &c.,

(Signed) J. A. WILLCOX, Captain.

Rear-Admiral Sir Edmund Lyons, Bart.,
&c., &c., &c., G.C.B.

PROCEEDINGS OF NAVAL BRIGADE.

No. 754. Royal Albert, off Sevastopol,
SIR, September 10, 1855.

I BEG leave to enclose, for the information of the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, copy of a Letter from Captain the Honourable Henry Keppel, reporting the proceedings of the Naval Brigade under his command, on the 7th and 8th instant, and enclosing a List of Casualties.

I am, &c.,

(Signed) EDMUND LYONS,
Rear-Admiral and Commander-in-Chief.

The Secretary of the Admiralty.

REPORTING PROCEEDINGS.

Royal Naval Brigade,
No. 16. before Sevastopol,
SIR, September 9, 1855.

I HAVE the honour to inform you that, in pursuance of instructions, a vigorous fire was opened from the batteries at six o'clock on the morning of the 7th, and was maintained throughout the day; the fire was recommenced yesterday morning with increased vigour, preparatory to an assault to be made by our Allies on the Malakoff, and subsequently by ourselves on the Redan.

2. At noon the French were observed to start en masse from their trenches and possess themselves in gallant style of the Malakoff Battery, on which the Tricolor flag was hoisted and the Imperial eagles planted within ten minutes of their quitting their trenches.

3. The French flag was no sooner displayed on the Malakoff than our storming party issued from their trenches and assailed the salient angle of the Redan, but the enemy were by that time prepared to meet them, and, as the supporting party advanced, a heavy fire of grape and canister was opened on them, in spite of a brisk fire kept up from our batteries on all parts of the Redan not assailed, as well as on the flanking batteries.

4. After maintaining the footing they had gained for some time, our troops were obliged to retire, the killed and wounded left on the ground sufficiently testifying how gallantly they had fought.

5. The fire from our batteries was kept up until dark, and at about eleven o'clock the enemy evacuated the Redan after having fired a train that exploded the magazines.

6. This morning's light showed how successful and complete had been the victory gained by the Allied Forces.

7. The enemy had evacuated all their positions on the south side of the harbour; the town, Fort Nicolai, Fort Paul, and dockyard, were in flames, and their line of battle ships had been sunk in the positions they were last seen in when at anchor.

8. The conduct of the officers and men of the brigade under my command has been such as to continue to merit the high opinion you have been pleased to express of them.

9. I have the honour to enclose a List of Casualties for the 7th and 8th.

I am, &c.,

(Signed) HENRY KEPPEL,
Captain Commanding Royal Naval Brigade.

Rear-Admiral Sir Edmund Lyons, Bart.,

At the Council-Chamber, Whitehall, the 20th day
of September 1855,

By the Lords of Her Majesty's Most Honourable
Privy Council.

The Lords of the Council, having taken into consideration certain applications for leave to export various articles, of which the exportation is prohibited to any place in Europe north of Dunkirk, or in the Mediterranean Sea, east of Malta, are pleased to order, and it is hereby ordered, that the prohibition to export such articles to any place east of Malta shall cease, with the exception of gunpowder, saltpetre, brimstone, sulphate of potash, muriate of potash (chloride of potassium), and arms and ammunition of every kind, with regard to which the prohibition is to remain in force; and their Lordships are hereby pleased to direct that this Order be substituted for their Lordships' Order of the 28th August last, which is hereby rescinded:

Whereof the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, and the Commissioners of Customs, and all other persons whom it may concern, are to take notice and govern themselves accordingly.

C. C. GREVILLE.

At the Council-Chamber, Whitehall, the 20th day
of September 1855.

By the Lords of Her Majesty's Most Honourable
Privy Council.

The Lords of the Council, having taken into consideration the expediency of prohibiting the export of chlorate of potash, as an article used in the manufacture of military and naval stores, are pleased to order, and it is hereby ordered, that the Officers of Her Majesty's Customs do prevent the exportation of chlorate of potash to any place in Europe north of Dunkirk, or in the Mediterranean Sea, east of Malta; and that the Officers of Her Majesty's Customs do permit the export of the said article to any other part of the World upon taking from the persons exporting the same a bond that it shall be landed and entered for consumption or use at the port of destination:

Whereof the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, and the Commissioners of Customs, and all other persons whom it may concern, are to take notice and govern themselves accordingly.

C. C. GREVILLE.
