WAR-DEPARTMENT, April 16, 1856.

LORD PANMURE has received a Despatch, of which the following is a copy, addressed to his Lordship by General Sir William Codrington, K.C.B. :—

Sevastopol, April 1, 1856.

MY LORD,

THERE is nothing particular to report, except the continuance of the well-being of the troops. Even under the circumstances of a month as severe in point of change and cold as any that we have had, there is no material increase in the number of sick. Though the numbers are higher, your Lordship will remember that drafts to the extent of 4,000 men have latterly been sent up from Malta. Yet the whole of the month of March has been very cold and trying, from northerly winds and frost almost every night, and the thermometer occasionally down at 13 and 18 degrees; and yesterday morning the ground was for a short time white with snow.

Having received the signature of General Lüders to the Armistice agreed upon by the Allied Generals, the continuation of it has been prolonged till further orders.

A boat from Her Majesty's ship Leopard entered the harbour from the sea yesterday, under a flag of truce, to carry on the communication across the harbour from our side. We had only one old and heavy Russian boat for this purpose. The conditions of the Armistice did not permit to either party the use of the harbour; and the entry of the boat of Her Majesty's ship Leopard was the result of communications between General Lüders and myself.

The Artillery continue to move the Russian guns from Sevastopol, as well as those damaged ones of ours from the batteries of attack; 718 are already embarked for England.

There have been recovered from below the water of the Dockyard by Mr Deane, the Submarine Engineer, eleven pieces of field artillery, with their limbers and waggons.

I have, &c.,

W. J. CODRINGTON,
General Commanding.

The Lord Panmure, &c., &c., &c.
