FUTTEHPOOR. Robert Tudor Tucker, Esquire	Civil and Sessions Judge of Futtehpoor	Futtehpoor	1857. June 10	The Europeans were all obliged to leave Futtehpoor, on night of 9th June, in consequence of the disorganized state of the district, and the near approach of mutinous troops, &c. Mr Tucker positively refused to accompany them, and was therefore the following day the only European left in the station. The jail was broken, and the treasury plundered at about 9 A.M., and an attack was made in the afternoon by a number of fanatic Mussulmans (headed by one Syud Mohumud Hosseen) on Mr Tucker. Mr Tucker took refuge on the roof of his cutcherry, and was able for some time to keep off his assailants: they however eventually set fire to the building, and under cover of the smoke, &c., succeeded in mounting the roof and despatching their victim.
Mr J. R. Collins and his wife (name unknown)	Inspecting Postmaster of the Cawnpore Division	Hata Pergunneh Suppehjar		It appears that Mr and Mrs Collins left Cawnpore in the early part of June. They intended proceeding to Banda, and had reached Khujwa, when they were seized by the retainers of Nuwaub Amjud Ally Khan; they were taken to Bindh-kee, and subsequently to the Nuwaub's own house at Hata Pergunneh Suppehjar, where they were kept prisoners for a week, and eventually foully murdered by the Nuwaub's orders about 15th June.

As per Return furnished by the Deputy-Commissioner—JULLUNDHUR.

S. F. Macmullen...	Brevet-Major	Jullundur	June 7	Wounded on the night of the mutiny. Brevet-Major Macmullen was in the lines of the 1st Troop, the other officers being in those of their respective Troops, attempting to prevent the men who had possessed themselves of their arms from mounting their horses, or further committing themselves. Having dismounted several, who promptly obeyed orders, he was giving a similar order by a trooper named Azmut Ally Khan, who fired his pistol at him, the distance not more than four yards, and sent the bullet or slug through the thumb and first finger of the right hand. This was the only shot fired in the lines of the 6th Cavalry. The Troop possibly feeling themselves committed by this flagrant act, at once mounted, and left with many from the other Troops, without, however, attempting any violence against their officers, who were really at their mercy
C. B. Basden	Captain	do	... 7	Received a sabre wound in the arm from a trooper of the 6th Light Cavalry, when endeavouring, with Ensigns Hawkins and Durnford, to prevent the men of his regiment (led on by a troop of the 6th Light Cavalry) from seizing their arms from the left wing bell of arms of the regiment
F. D. Hawkins.....	Ensign	do	... 7	Received a wound from a pistol ball in the back from a trooper of the 6th Light Cavalry, when endeavouring to prevent the men of his regiment (led on by a troop of the 6th Light Cavalry) from seizing their arms from the left wing bell of arms of the regiment

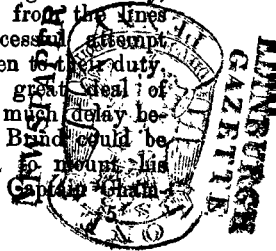

Name.	Designation.	Place.	Date.	Circumstances under which the murder took place.
C. K. Bates (wounded)	Lieutenant	Jullundur	1857. June 7	This officer was officer of the day on the 7th June last; at 11 P.M. a fire broke out in the lines of the regiment, to which he at once proceeded; on getting near the bells of arms, he perceived that the men had seized their arms and were loading. He went up to a body of men who were collected in front of No. 5 Company lines, and endeavoured to persuade them from this purpose. Two sepoys fired at him nearly at the same moment, the first shot entering and breaking his right arm. He saw the man raise his musket, but should not be able to recognise him
F. J. S. Bagshawe ...	Lieutenant	do	May 13	Died of his wounds, Lieutenant and Adjutant. Was in the lines speaking to about 200 men, whom he was apparently pacifying, when a trooper of the 6th Regiment Light Cavalry rode up and inflicted on him a mortal wound
H. Durnford	Ensign	do	" 13	Received a pistol ball in the arm, and three sabre wounds across the head and neck from troopers of the 6th Light Cavalry, and a bayonet wound in the back when endeavouring to prevent the men of his regiment (led on by a troop of the 6th Light Cavalry) from seizing their arms from the left wing bell of arms of the regiment
Mrs Joyce	Prostitute	do	June 7	Died from the effects of the wounds received, on the 8th of August 1857 On the night of the 7th June, when the mutineers of 36th, 61st, and Cavalry, passed through the Sudder Bazar, some of them shot Mrs Joyce through the chest, but no one saw the deed done
George Nelson	Quarter-Master Sergeant	do	" 7	Received a wound on the head from a blow of a bamboo, by a sepoy of the regiment, when in the execution of his duty

As per Return furnished by the Deputy Commissioner of SEALKOTE.

J. Graham	Superintending Surgeon	On the Pukka Road from Cantonments to Fort	July 9	Dr James Graham appears, on hearing of the mutiny, to have started at about 6 A.M., in his buggy, with his daughter, Miss Graham, for the fort. On passing the corner house of Cantonments, and getting on the Pukka Road leading to the Fort, they were attacked by a large party of troopers of the 9th Cavalry, one of whom shot Dr Graham in the back of the head, killing him at once. The troopers turned the buggy back, and Miss Graham drove back with the dead body of her father, and after various adventures was taken to the Quarter

Name.	Designation.	Place.	Date.	Circumstances under which the murder took place.
J. C. Graham	Medical Storekeeper	On the Pucka Road, from Cantonments to Fort	1857. July 9	Guard of the 9th Cavalry, where she joined Colonel Campbell, commanding the corps, who, with his wife, were being protected by the troopers, and were brought down to the fort in the evening. Dr Graham had fire-arms with him, but did not attempt to use them Dr John Colin Graham left his house in cantonments on the morning of the mutiny, in his carriage, accompanied by his wife, and Mrs Gray and her children; when he had left cantonments, and just turned off on the road to the fort, a party of troopers surrounded the carriage; the ladies implored and begged the troopers not to hurt them; the latter answered that they did not wish to hurt them, but only aimed at the Sahib log . One trooper fired and wounded Dr Graham in the arm, and then another rode up deliberately and shot him through the side. The carriage was then turned back to cantonments, and Dr Graham died in about an hour at the Medical Depot, where Mrs Graham took him, in the hopes of obtaining surgical aid. The grief of his wife was most painful and heart-rending, and while in the fort she nearly sunk from sorrow. Dr Graham had no fire-arms with him.
J. Bishop.....	Brigade Major	Under the Walls of the Fort	," 9	Left cantonments in his curricule, with his wife and children; they went down to the fort probably by the Kutch Road, and so avoided the party of troopers who killed the two Drs Graham, but under the walls of the fort they were set on by another party, who fired at the carriage recklessly, without any care of the persons of his wife and children. It is supposed that in order to save them he jumped out of the carriage and tried to escape on foot. He was first severely wounded, and staggered into a ditch full of water; a trooper then rode up and deliberately shot him through the head; the horses started off at full speed, and upset the carriage. Mrs Bishop and her children were saved and brought into the fort
Rev. T. Hunter ... Mrs James Hunter Thomas Hunter, (child of above)	Missionary	Opposite the Jail, near the Kutcherry	," 9	The circumstances connected with the murder of the Rev. Mr Hunter and family were especially distressing, for they had been advised, on the day previous to the mutiny, to leave the station. Mrs Hunter had had a dreadful dream of murder the night before, and this with

F. Brind	Colonel in the Bengal Artillery, and Brigadier Commanding the Station	Wounded, just as he had come out of his compound on the 9th July, and died in the Fort early next morning	July 9 and 10	the warning, had induced them to pack up and arrange for a departure to Lahore, on the evening of the 8th. They left their own house with the intention of going to Lahore, but only went as far as the Rev. Mr Hill's house, which was out in the country, a little beyond mine, and near the Wuzeerabad Road. When the mutiny broke out, it would seem that, instead of starting at once along that road, they adhered to their intention of going to Lahore, and in order to reach the Goojranwalla Road, had to make for the city. They passed my compound apparently before I had had any intimation of the outbreak; when they got in front of the jail, the party of 40 troopers, who had assembled to release the prisoners, observed them, and, as I understand from the conflicting accounts of the native eye-witnesses, a trooper shot Mr Hunter, and the same ball wounded Mrs Hunter; they and their child were then dragged out of the carriage and hacked to pieces by the Kutcherry and Jail Chupprassees. The resaldar of the mounted police acknowledged, on his trial before Captain R. Lawrence, that he had seen the murder perpetrated, and had not attempted to interfere. I believe that this was one of the principal grounds with the Commission for inflicting on him the extreme penalty of death. Hoonunt Khan, a Puthan, from Zillah Barielly, formerly a Kutcherry Chupprasee, and changed to the Kotewallee by me, shortly before the mutiny, was the principal instigator of this atrocious murder, and the Commission offered a reward of 1,000 rupees for his apprehension. He is supposed to be now somewhere in the territory of Maharajah Rumbheer Sing. Brigadier Brind appears to have had some intimation of the approaching mutiny, for on that night he kept his horse saddled for the first time. The first intimation of the outbreak he received was from Captain Balmain, 9th Light Cavalry, who had come from the lines after an unsuccessful attempt to recal the men to duty. It required a great deal of persuasion and much delay before Brigadier Brind could be prevailed upon to mount his horse and fly.

			1857.	bers, Cantonment Joint Magistrate, who was living with the Brigadier, and Lt. Montgomery, as well as Captain Balmain, accompanied him. On quitting the compound they were fired at by a large party of troopers, apparently specially told off to this work; none of the shots of this volley took effect, but some troopers who had reserved their fire took aim, and in a second volley wounded the Brigadier. The ball entered the middle of the back, and penetrated deep through the stomach. The Brigadier, though weak from loss of blood, managed to ride to the Fort, protected by Captain Balmain, who exchanged several shots with the troopers. The Brigadier was attended by Dr Guise. The wound proved fatal, and he died on the morning of the 10th July.
A. H. Prinsep	Cornet, 9th Cavalry	Shot in the right arm on the Wuzeerabad-road	July 9	Cornet Prinsep was pursued by some troopers of the 9th Light Cavalry from the Brigadier's house, in the cantonments, for five or six miles along the Wuzeerabad Road. One man succeeded in overtaking him, and wounded him in the right arm by a pistol shot. But being attacked and nearly dismounted by Cornet Prinsep, he gave up the combat, and allowed Cornet Prinsep to continue on his way.

The Right Honourable the Lords of the Committee of Privy Council for Trade and Plantations have received, through the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, a copy of a Despatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Lisbon, forwarding copies of Orders recently issued by the Board of Health at that capital, and containing regulations to the following effect in respect to the quarantine to be observed by vessels entering the port of Lisbon.

In addition to the necessary drugs and means of purification and fumigation, quick-lime must be provided for coating such parts of the vessel as are not painted in oil, or covered with a material which can be washed.

The Health Officer at Belem will point out to the masters of vessels undergoing quarantine, the quantity and quality of drugs required for the necessary purposes of purification.

The Health Officer, for the convenience of masters of vessels subjected to a quarantine of observation, can order the discharge of the cargoes into the lazaretto, or into lighters.

The quarantine can be prolonged until the Health Officer shall consider the fumigation of the vessel complete.

The white-liming and other purification required, will extend to vessels anchored off the Custom House, but will not, however, be allowed to affect the discharge of cargoes.

The quarantine for baggage will date from the time of its purification in the lazaretto, and the cost of the drugs, &c., necessary for fumigation, being borne by the owner of the baggage.
