The following copy of a letter from Lieutenant-General Sir Ralph Abercromby, K. B. to the Earl of Elgin, together with dispatches from his Lordship to his Royal Highness the Duke of York and Lord Hawkesbury, and a letter from Colonel Anstruther to Colonel Brownrigg, of which the following are extracts, have been this day received:

Copy of a letter from Sir RALPH ABERCROMBY to the Earl of Elgin, dated camp before Alexandria, 16th March 1801.

My Lord,

On the ift instant the fleet arrived in fight of Alexandria; on the 2d it anchored in Aboukir Bay; the weather did not permit any debarkation before the 8th; on that day it was happily effected, under the most trying circumstances. The boats had near a mile to row, and were for some time under the fire of fifteen pieces of artillery, and the musquetry of 2500 men; still the intrepidity of the troops overcame every difficulty. We took eight pieces of cannon.

On the 9th, the remainder of the army was landed. On the 12th we marched forwards to within two leagues of Alexandria, and one league of the enemy, who were advantageously posted on a ridge, with their right to the Canal of Alexandria, and their lest to the sea. On the 13th, we moved forwards to attack the enemy, and to turn their lest. They did not, however, wait, but came down and attacked us. The action was warm; but the enemy were every where forced under the walls of Alexandria. Our lots is considerable. Although Colonel Erskine is wounded, he is doing well. He has lost a leg. His regiment gained great credit, but suffered severely. No officer of rank is killed or dangerously wounded. Excuse this scrawl, written on my knee. R. ABERCROMBY.

Extract of a letter from the Earl of Flein to his Royal Highness the Duke of York, dated Constantinople, April 4, 1801.

As Colonel Anstruther's letter to me, which accompanied that to Colonel Brownrigg, was written on the 16th of March, I take the liberty of adding to your Royal Highness, that Menou having, with 2000 cavalry, joined the corps at Alexandria, attacked Sir Ralph Abercromby on the 21st. The assault was vigorous; but the enemy were entirely repulsed with great loss, not, however, before Sir Ralph Abercromby, General Moore, General Hope, and Sir Sidney Smith, had been wounded slightly; and Colonel Abercromby had lost a limb. Colonel Paget appears to have had a slight wound.

Lord Keith's last letter says, all the wounded are surprisingly well, considering they are all by cannon or grape shot. I may add, that my Janissay, who lest Rhodes on the 27th, mentions, that some of the troops who came there first, or had been lest sick, were already so well as to have sailed from thence to join.

Nothing could have been more brilliant than our operations appear to have been.

Extract of a letter from Lord Elgin to Lord Hawkes-Bury, dated Constantinople, April 14, 1801.

I have the happiness of informing your Lordship, that I have this moment received an express from Rhodes, dated 27th March, with a leries of private accounts, of the successful progress of Sir Ralph Abercromby's army.

It appears that Menou must have set out from Cairo on the first intelligence of Sir Ralph Abercromby's landing. Meanwhile our army had advanced (under circumstances far too honourable for the British arms for me to attempt relating on the imperfect details I possels), and had taken post within three miles of Alexandria, where they had prepared against an attack from Menou, who, with two thousand cavalry, having formed a junction with the garrison of Alexandria, came against our army on the 21st.

In this action we have to regret about 500 men killed and wounded; while the enemy positively lost 2000 men killed and wounded, and 500 taken prisoners. On the preceding Wednesday, Aboukir Castle surrendered, and the British and Turkish slags were slying there.

Extract of a letter from Colonel Anstruther to Colonel Brownerge, flated camp near Alexandria, 16th March 1801.

The fleet failed from Marmaxie on the 22d February, and anchored in Aboukir Bay on the 2d March. From that day to the 7th, the weather was so boisterous, and the swell so great, that it was impracticable to disembark. This circumstance gave the enemy sull leisure to collect troops and artillery, and to make every necessary preparation to oppose us. The whole infantry of the garrison of Alexandria, 300 cavalry, and 14 or 15 pieces of cannon, were placed on a space of little more than two miles, from near the Castle of Aboukir to the narrow isthmus which forms the boundary of the lake. Such was the situation in which we found things, on the morning of the 8th, when the descent was made. Nothing, I believe, ever exceeded the boldness and perseverance with which the boats continued to approach the shore, under a shower of bullets, shells, and grape. Every discharge was answered by a shout from the seamen, and all seemed totally insensible of danger. The reserve of the right formed as if on the parade, and in a moment carried a height nearly equal to, and very like to that of Cannor the carried and to and very like to that of Cannor the carried and to and very like to that of Cannor the carried and to and very like to that of Cannor the carried and the parade, and in a world like to that of Cannor the carried and the parade, and very like to that of Cannor the carried and the parade, and very like to that of Cannor the carried and the parade.
