

Town of Kingston upon Hull, beg Leave to approach your Royal Person with our warmest Wishes and Congratulations on your Majesty's Marriage, an Event so interesting to your Majesty, and to all your faithful Subjects; the kind Concern your Majesty has already shewn for their Ease and Interests, your generous Attention to the Rights and Liberties of your happy People, would alone leave them without Excuse, should they ever be insensible where your Majesty's Peace or Glory were concerned: warmed with these Sentiments, we reflect with Transport on the many eminent and amiable Qualifications for which your Royal Consort has been so loudly distinguished, as these give us the pleasing and well-grounded Prospect of seeing that much loved Monarch happy, from whom, under God, are derived the various and valuable Blessings we enjoy.

We do also most sincerely congratulate your Majesty on those Successes which have already marked the Dawning of your Reign with Glory; may a Continuation of them enable you to give Peace to the afflicted World, and still further Security to your People; and O may you long, very long, live to enjoy the sweet Returns of that Love and Gratitude, which Britons must ever feel, till full of Days, and full of Honour, you receive those bright Rewards, which are destined in Futurity to the Fathers of their Countries, and the Friends of Mankind.

Given under our Common Seal this Eighteenth Day of September, in the Year of our Lord, One thousand seven hundred and sixty one.

The following Address of the Mayor, Bailiffs, and Burgeses of the Town of Cambridge, has been presented to His Majesty by the Honourable, Charles Sloane Cadogan, and Some Jennyns, Esqrs. their Representatives in Parliament, and the Earl of Kinross, their Recorder, being introduced by the Lord of His Majesty's Bed-chamber in Waiting: Which Address His Majesty was pleased to receive very graciously.

To the King's most Excellent Majesty,

The humble Address of the Mayor, Bailiffs, and Burgeses of the Town of Cambridge.

Most gracious Sovereign,

WE your Majesty's dutiful and loyal Subjects, the Mayor, Bailiffs, and Burgeses of your Ancient and Loyal Corporation of Cambridge, warmly united with every Circumstance in which either the Honour and Dignity of your Crown, or your Majesty's personal and domestick Happiness is concerned, beg Leave most humbly to offer our sincere and fervent Congratulations upon the Celebration of your Royal Nuptials, with a Princess possessed of every amiable and virtuous Accomplishment that can entitle Her to your Majesty's Affection, and to the Esteem and Confidence of your faithful Subjects. This Event is of the highest Importance to these Kingdoms, as it affords the most reasonable Expectation of our Posterity's enjoying, under a Race of Kings descended from your Majesty, these many invaluable Blessings, the full Possession of which constitutes the present, and peculiar Happiness of Britons.

It is with the greatest Pleasure and Satisfaction, Sir, that we take this joyful Occasion of renewing our strongest Assurances of unalterable Attachment to your Majesty's Person and Government, and our most ardent Wishes for the lasting Glory and Prosperity of your Reign.

Given under our Common Seal this Twenty-first Day of September, One thousand seven hundred and sixty-one.

The following Address of the Mayor, Bailiffs, and Burgeses of the Borough of Leicester, has been presented to His Majesty by Sir Thomas Palmer, Baronet, one of the Representatives in Parliament for the County of Leicester, being introduced by the Lord of His Majesty's Bed-chamber in Waiting:

Which Address His Majesty was pleased to receive very graciously.

To the King's most Excellent Majesty,

The humble Address of the Mayor, Bailiffs, and Burgeses of the Borough of Leicester.

May it please your Majesty,

WE your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal Subjects, the Mayor, Bailiffs, and Burgeses of the Borough of Leicester, humbly beg Leave to present our most sincere Congratulations to your Majesty; on the joyful Event of your Majesty's Royal Nuptials, and to add our most hearty Wishes that it may give as great domestic Bliss to your Majesty, and your Royal Consort, as it does public Happiness to your People.

The repeated Glories, which in quick Succession have distinguished your Majesty's auspicious Reign; the great Advantages resulting from them to your Subjects; and above all, that unparalleled Goodness, which hath so amply displayed itself in your Majesty's early Age, could not but fill us with the most comfortable Hopes of the long Continuance of the Happiness and Prosperity of these Kingdoms. But how greatly are these Hopes enlarged by your Majesty's happy Union with a Princess so accomplished, as to add a fresh Lustre, even to your Majesty's Throne: A Union, from which we derive the pleasing Expectation of seeing a Royal Race of Britons, sprung from a British King, inheriting his Virtues, formed by his Wisdom, and imitating his great Example; devoting themselves with your Majesty's Zeal, to the arduous, but noble Task, of adorning and protecting their native Country.

That it may please the Almighty to fulfil this Expectation by blessing your Majesty's Nuptials with a numerous Progeny, glorious and good as their Royal Parents; that your Majesty and your most illustrious Consort may long enjoy the exquisite Delight of seeing them the Boast of this, and the Admiration of other Nations; and that there may never be wanting one of your Majesty's immediate Descendants to sway the Sceptre of these Realms, and dispense to our latest Posterity the Blessings we ourselves enjoy, is the ardent Prayer of your Majesty's most dutiful, most loyal, and most affectionate Subjects:

Given under our Common Seal, the Eighteenth Day of September, in the Year of our Lord, One thousand seven hundred and sixty-one.

The following Address of the Portreve and Burgeses of the Borough of Great Bedwin, in the County of Wilts, has been presented to His Majesty by Admiral Cotes, one of their Representatives in Parliament, being introduced by the Lord of His Majesty's Bed-chamber in Waiting: Which Address His Majesty was pleased to receive very graciously.

To the King's most Excellent Majesty,

The humble Address of the Portreve and Burgeses of the Borough of Great Bedwin in the County of Wilts.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

YOUR Majesty's most loyal and faithful Subjects, the Portreve and Burgeses of the Borough of Great Bedwin, most dutifully intreat your favourable Acceptance of their humble, but cordial Congratulations.

Happy, almost to the Extent of our Wishes, under your wife and equal Administration, the Experience of our present Happiness made us solicitous for its Permanency: What human Wisdom could do to secure it to us, your Majesty has effected. The early Celebration of your Royal Nuptials is at once a Proof to us of your providential Regard for your happy People, and an auspicious Pledge of future Blessings.

May the benevolent Author of Love and Harmony improve your Joys, and confirm our Hopes! May those amiable Virtues, which now give Lustre
