

The following Letter is published by the Desire of the Writer.

London, August 20, 1784.

Right Honorable Sir,
THE Distresses of my Country have awakened in my Breast a Monitor, which informs me, that in my younger Days when I followed the Seas, and carried Adventures as most Seamen do, and by which the Revenue was injured, I acted wrong; in consequence of which Conviction, I have, Right Honorable Sir, inclosed Three Hundred Pounds in Bank Bills, which is a vast Sum out of the small Fortune I am possessed of, which I humbly request may be applied to the Service of my Country, humbly hoping, for the Quiet of my Conscience, that I may be included in the Act of Indemnity, which is about to pass; and I take further the Liberty of assuring you, that I have never acted with Violence against the Laws of my Country, nor have been a common Smuggler; that there is no Process out against me, nor can any Person whatever take one out against me. Humbly hoping that what I have done and said may meet with your's and my Country's Approbation, and entitle me to be particularly mentioned in the Act, I take the Liberty of adding, that I am, with the utmost Respect for your many Virtues,

Right Honorable Sir,
Your most humble,
Most devoted,
And obedient Servant,
T. T.

I humbly desire that on the receiving the aforementioned Bills, it may be acknowledged in the Gazette, and the London Chronicle.
