Naples, August 26.

Her Sicilian Majesty was this Day happily delivered of a Prince.

Vienna, August 27.

The last Letters from the Bannat advise, that the Emperor arrived at Weiskirchen on the 20th Instant. Whilst His Imperial Majesty was on his March, the Turks made strong Efforts to penetrate into the Heart of that Province. They attacked a Defile, called the Veteranische Hole, with great Fury, made themselves Masters of an advanced Post, and put to the Sword two Divisions of Brechainville's Regiment of Foot, giving Quarter neither to Officers nor Soldiers. They made several unsuccessful Attempts to carry the principal Post, but were always beat back with great Loss. This however appeared to be only a secondary Object with them. Their principal one was to drive General Wartenleben from the Heights, where his Corps was advantageously posted near Meadia. For that Purpose, the Seraskier of Georgia was detached, on the 17th Instant, with a Corps of 16,000 Men, mostly Spahis, to attack that General, whose Force consisted of about 8,000 Men. The Action began early in the Morning, and was so ill conducted on the Part of the Turks, that the Austrian Infantry (from behind their Redoubts) had little else to do than to mow down the Turkish Ranks, as they rashly advanced within the Reach of Grape Shot. To this Carnage they exposed themselves repeatedly, during the Course of the Day, but with out ever making the smallest Impression on
