

alienate the Minds of your Majesty's Subjects from that excellent Form of Government, Civil and Ecclesiastical, which, under the kind and merciful Providence of God, has been happily established in this Kingdom. And we, who, from professional Duties, are particularly engaged in the Cultivation of all those mild and temperate Virtues which Christianity so eminently cherishes and encourages, cannot but sincerely lament all Disposition to Riot and Tumult, from whatever Grounds it may originate.

Our established Constitution, which has long been the Boast and Glory of our Country, seems to us to be admirably calculated to promote all wise, and just, and salutary Ends of Government; and at the same Time to secure to your Majesty's Subjects every Degree of Freedom, consistent with the Obligations of Morality and Religion, and the Preservation of the Peace and Happiness of the Community.

We trust that your Majesty will experience from the Civil Magistrates all due Exertions in those Matters to which your Majesty has been pleased to command their sedulous Attention. It will be our Duty also to administer all the Assistance in our Power, and to act, as far as we are able, in subserviency to your Majesty's most gracious Intentions.

The beneficial Effects which we may hope to produce in this Respect will be derived from a diligent inculcating of the Principles and Doctrines of our Religion. These will furnish the Christian Disciple with strong Reasons for not disturbing the mildest and best Government that ever existed; as well as for demeaning himself towards his Fellow Subjects, whatever may be their Description or Rank in Civil Society, with Humility, with Moderation, and with Kindness.

The following Address of the High Sheriff, Lord Lieutenant, Nobility, Gentry, Clergy, and Freeholders of the County of Gloucester, has been presented to the King by the Honorable Captain George Cranfield Berkeley, one of the Representatives in Parliament for that County, being introduced by the Lord of His Majesty's Bedchamber in Waiting: Which Address His Majesty was pleased to receive very graciously.

To the KING's Most Excellent Majesty.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

WE, the High Sheriff, Lord Lieutenant, Nobility, Gentry, Clergy, and Freeholders of the County of Gloucester, animated with true Loyalty, and sensible of the manifold Blessings we enjoy from Civil and Religious Liberty, are happy to testify our Gratitude for that tender Solitude and paternal regard, evidently manifested by your Majesty's unremitting Attention to the Interest and Happiness of all your People.

We cannot but lament that the Temper of the Times rendered the Royal Proclamation necessary, but we trust, under Divine Providence, that by your Majesty's ready Discernment, co-operating with the Ardor and Affection of your Majesty's loyal and faithful Subjects, the wild and visionary Projects of wanton Speculators will be baffled, and their seditious Efforts eluded.

We likewise earnestly pray, that your Majesty's Subjects in general may ever happily experience the blessed Comforts and Effects, which result from internal Tranquillity, and by a proper Reverence to their King, a due Submission to the Laws, and just Confidence in the Wisdom and Integrity of Parliament, may add lasting Firmness and Stability to the Government and Constitution of their Country, and, by united Zeal for the Public Welfare, may increase the Lustre and Honor of the British Crown, and the Glory and Prosperity of all your Majesty's Dominions.

The following Address of the Gentlemen, Clergy, Freeholders, and other Inhabitants of the County of Carmarthen, has been presented to the King by the Honorable George Talbot Rice, Representative in Parliament for that County, being introduced by the Lord of His Majesty's Bedchamber in Waiting: Which Address His Majesty was pleased to receive very graciously.

To the KING's Most Excellent Majesty.

WE, the Gentlemen, Clergy, Freeholders, and other Inhabitants of the County of Carmarthen, beg Leave to offer to your Majesty our warmest and most grateful Acknowledgements for your uniform Solitude for the true Interests and Welfare of your People, and particularly for your Majesty's late most gracious Proclamation. We have seen with Indignation the Attempts that have been made, by the Publication of seditious Writings, and by the Formation and Correspondence of unwarrantable Associations, tending not only to excite Discontent in the Minds of the People, but aiming ultimately (as we conceive) at the total Subversion of a Constitution, which has for Ages been the great Boast of Britons, and the Admiration and Envy of surrounding Nations. But we are not alarmed, because we are convinced that a great irresistible Majority of the Nation unites with us in firm Attachment to our excellent Constitution, and in a grateful Sense of the Blessings and unexampled Prosperity we enjoy under your Majesty's mild and benign Government; and because we feel a settled Determination, in our several Stations and Capacities, to support the Laws with Energy and Effect, to maintain and preserve, unimpaired, the Rights of Freedom transmitted to us by our Ancestors, and to resist, if the Necessity shall so require, at the Risk of whatever is most dear and valuable to us, any rash and wicked Attempts, tending to alienate the Affections of your Majesty's Subjects from the Blessings they enjoy under your Majesty's mild and excellent Government.

The following Address of the Gentlemen, Clergy, Freeholders, and Inhabitants of the County of Radnor, has been presented to the King by John Lewis, Esq; Sheriff of that County, being introduced by the Lord of His Majesty's Bedchamber in Waiting: Which Address His Majesty was pleased to receive very graciously.

To the KING's Most Excellent Majesty,

The humble Address of the Gentlemen, Clergy, Freeholders, and Inhabitants of the County of Radnor.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

WE, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal Subjects, the Gentlemen, Clergy, Freeholders, and Inhabitants of the County of Radnor, beg Leave to lay
