By Command of His Royal Highness the Prince Regent,

FREDERICK, Commander in Chief

H. TORRENS,

Colonel and Military Secretary.

THE following Address has been presented to His Royal Highness the Prince Regent; which Address His Royal Highness was pleased to receive very graciously:

To His Royal Highness George Prince of Wales, REGENT of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland.

The humble and dutiful Address of the Ministers and Elders of the Synod of Presbyterians in Ireland, distinguished by the name Seceders, assembled in Cookstown, the 10th July 1813.

May it please your Royal Highness,

WE, His Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders of the Synod of Presbyterians in Ireland, distinguished by the name Seceders, humbly entreat your Royal Highness's permission to lay before the throne of our venerable Sovereign renewed assurances of continued loyalty and affection.

The many virtues that adorned His Majesty's private life, cannot but have endeared him to every lover of virtue and religion; and the mild, but steady and unshaken firmness, with which, through a long reign, he has maintained and directed the principles of our happy Constitution, cannot but command the veneration of all, who, with us, regard them with pride and with jealousy, as our great security for civil liberty, and as wearing the most benign aspect towards that religion which we regard still more.

With these objects before our eyes, and strongly impressing our hearts, our sympathy in His Majesty's affliction is sincere, and deep felt.

In your Royal Highness we recognise, with great pleasure, the same princely virtues, the same wisdom of counsel, the same tender solicitude for the happiness of His Majesty's people, and the same zeal to preserve their civil liberties, and to promote their religious and moral improvement, that engaged the willing and cheerful subjection of our ancestors and of us.

The necessity of war we deeply deplore; but seeing an enemy has been permitted, to rise up against the common liberties of Europe, insatiable in his lust of dominion, unprincipled in his mode of warfare, and possessed of the means of hostility to an unusual extent, and seeing his most inveterate animosity is directed against the liberty, tranquillity, and prosperity of the British dominions, we feel the justice of the contest, in which His Majesty's arms are employed; and can with confidence appeal to the God of Armies, that he would direct the councils of the nation, go forth with our armies, and bring the purposes of our enemies to nought.

Deign then, august Prince, to accept our congratulation in the success that has hitherto attended His Majesty's arms, the wisdom that has governed your Royal Highness's counsels, and the confidence with which a grateful and prosperous kingdom is inspired.

In fine, gracious Prince, we humbly repeat our sincere professions of gratitude for the advantages derived to our religious communion, from the munificence of His Majesty, and your Royal Highness.
Our constant and fervent prayers are; that you
