Admiralty-Office, November 26, 1813.

YESTERDAY His Serene Highness, the Prince of Orange, embarked from Deal for Holland, on board His Majesty's ship Warrior, of seventy-four guns, commanded by Captain Lord Viscount Torrington.

His Serene Highness was accompanied by the Earl of Clancarty, and followed by the respective suites of His Serene Highness and that nobleman.

On his arrival at Deal, his Serene Highness was received by a guard of honour, and waited upon by Vice-Admiral Foley, Commander-in-Chief, and the Captains of His Majesty's navy then at Deal.

The Vice-Admiral's barge, with an orange flag flying, conveyed His Serene Highness to the Warrior, and on his embarking in the barge, the flagship of the Commander-in-Chief, fired a salute of twenty-one-guns.

On His Serene Highness's going on board the Warrior, the orange flag was hoisted at the main-top-mast-head, and immediately saluted with twenty-one guns, by each of His Majesty's ships, and by those of His Majesty the Emperor of Russia, then lying in the Downs.

Bremen, were no longer under the dominion of France; His Royal Highness was pleased, in the name and in the behalf of His Majesty, to direct, that the Blockade of that part of the coast of Germany, comprehended within the above description, (which was instituted in virtue of His Majesty's Orders in Council, of the 24th of April 1809, and of the 17th of May 1809, and His Majesty's Orders in Council, Injunctions and Instructions, should be discontinued; with the exception of such posts, as may still be occupied by the troops of the enemy.

A DISPATCH, of which the following is an Extract, has been received by Viscount Castlereagh, His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, from Lieutenant-General the Honourable Sir Charles W. Stewart, K. B. dated

I HEREWITH have the honour to acknowledge to your Lordship, the reports which have this day reached me from the Silesian Army.

Before daylight on the morning of the 27th of October, the enemy had quitted the town of Eisenach, which was immediately after entered by Marshal Blücher's army, an advanced corps of which had been sent directly in pursuit, and came up with the rear of the enemy at the entrance of the defiles in the mountains, within about a German mile from the town. The blowing up of several ammunition waggons, the destruction or abandonment of baggage, and the capture of several stragglers, was the immediate consequence, but the enemy had penetrated far into the defiles, where the ground was not favourable for the advance of the cavalry, and it was only by following his march for the three subsequent days, that the precipitancy and disasters of his flight became obvious. For an extent of nearly 50 English miles, from Eisenach to Fulda, carcasses of dead and dying horses without number, dead bodies of men, who had been either killed or perished through hunger, sickness, or fatigue, lying on the roads or in the ditches; parties of prisoners and stragglers, brought in by the Cossacks, blown up or destroyed ammunition and baggage waggons, in such numbers as absolutely to obstruct the road, sufficiently attested the sufferings of the enemy, whilst pillaged and burning towns and villages marked, at the same time, the ferocity with which he had conducted himself. The number of the dead bodies on the road had been considerably augmented, from a resolution that had been taken to carry off, on the side and wounded, not resulting surely from any principle of humanity, but probably as matter of boast, in the relations that might be given to the world of the event, as several of these men were found abandoned on the road, in the last gasp of hunger and disease, the dead and the dying frequently mixed together, lying in groups of six or eight, by half-extinguished fires, on the road side. Several of these men must have been compelled to move on foot, as their bodies were found on the road with the sticks with which they had endeavoured to support their march, lying by their sides. The number of dead horses might have been counted by hundreds, and in the space from Eisenach to Fulda, could certainly not have amounted to much less than a thousand. The enemy continued to be closely pursued during the three days march from Eisenach to Vach, Hildburghausen, and Fulda, and frequent cannonading ensued at the head of the advanced guard, but the nature of the country not permitting the cavalry to act, the enemy escaped with only such losses as have been enumerated.

On arrival at Fulda, it was ascertained that Buonaparte had fled in the direction of Frankfort, but a subsequent relation assures, that General Count Wrede has taken Hanau, with his Bavarian troops, by assault, on the 25th; Napoleon would be therefore compelled to turn towards Coblenz, and Marshal Blücher has made his dispositions for following him in that direction. General Count St. Priest, of General Baron Suchen's division, has, in the meantime, entered Cassel. General Baron Suchen, who had not found it necessary to pursue in that direction, halts this day at Lautnbach, General Count Langeron at Luder, and General D'Yorck at Netzhoff. The whole will move forward immediately on the Lahn.

Ulrickstein, November 2, 1813.

IT had been the original intention of Field-Marshal Blücher, to keep the high road to Frankfort, on which he was already the foremost in advance; but the columns of the grand combined army following close on the same route, the solicitations of the Prince Marshal commanding it, who represented the difficulties of subsistence, and the advance of General Wrede on Hanau, induced him to turn off to the right, so as effectually to provide against the enemy's effecting his retreat by the way of Coblenz. The march was to Ulrickstein, an old town with a castle, on the highest pinnacle of the Werraberg mountains. The roads, it was full of every obstacle that hills, woods, ravines, morasses, and roads that had never been destined for wheel conveyances, could present; and were, in fact such, as, according to any usual military calculation, would have been considered as impracticable for the movements of a large army; infantry, cavalry, artillery, and baggage, every thing, however, were pushed over them. The Russian twelve-pounders frequently stuck in the road, but where six horses were not sufficient, twelve were used, and finally, every thing was made to yield to the perseverance and determined resolution, which has distinguished all the operations of this army. The troops after their long march, were cantoned in several of the small mountain villages; and corps of three thousand men were allotted to some, whose usual population would not amount to as many hundreds. The inhabitants supplied their wants with cheerfulness in every thing. The soldiers were delighted, and they had equal reason to be satisfied with each other. The soldiers from Caucasus and the Volga, forgot all the fatigues of their long marches, in the hospitable reception these peasants had afforded them.

On arrival at Ulrickstein, accounts were received by Field-Marshal Blücher, that General Wrede had fallen in with the enemy, during their retreat on the 29th, and took four thousand prisoners, many of them of the guards. On the 30th, he was himself attacked by Napoleon, but enabled to maintain his position. On the 31st, another affair is reported to have taken place, but the result is not known. At or near Gelnhausen, General Platoff fell in also with the enemy, and, as reported to the Field-Marshal, has taken three thousand prisoners. The Field-Marshal marches this day to Giessen.

P. S. Giessen, November 2, 1813, 4 P. M.—It is here reported, that Napoleon is still in Frankfort, and has concentrated his army between and round Hanau, Frankfort, and the Rhine; that General Wrede, who had possessed himself of both Hanau and Frankfort, found it necessary, to draw in his force, to resist the attacks of Napoleon, who, after his first affairs, returned from the Frankfort road to attack the General, and that he is now in position, about these towns, both of which he occupies. There are further reports of another battle, in which General Wrede has been successful, but no accounts to be relied on, have been, as yet, received.

WAR DEPARTMENT.

Downing-Street, November 27, 1813.

DISPATCHES, of which the following are copies, and an extract, have been received by Earl Bathurst, from Major McDonald.

(Extract.)

Oliva, near Dantzic, October 15, 1813.

THE suburb of Ohra (where the enemy had established several block-houses) as well as the hill which immediately commands it, were attacked.

on the night of the 10th instant, by a force composed of Russian and Prussian troops. The hill was immediately carried, but the block-houses continued in the possession of the enemy until the following evening, when, being set on fire, they were forced to abandon them. The loss sustained by the troops employed on this occasion was severe, and may, I fear, be estimated at between four and five hundred men, killed and wounded. This is the only event of any consequence which has occurred since I wrote your Lordship on the 1st instant.

Offen, near Dantzic, October 25, 1813.

MY LORD,

THE height above the suburb of Oliva, which I informed your Lordship in my letter of the 15th instant, the enemy were driven from on the 10th, being within range of that part of the town called the Specker Insel, where it was understood a quantity of provisions had been deposited. His Serene Highness the Duke of Württemberg ordered several batteries to be constructed thereon.

The batteries were opened on the 18th, and have continued to fire, with little cessation, since that time; a considerable number of buildings have in consequence been burnt.

The weather during the last fortnight, having on the whole been very favourable, a large quantity of gabions and fascines have been collected and placed in dépôt. The want of gabions and fascines being the principal cause of the delay, the first parallel may be expected to be projected on immediately.

I have the honour to be, &c.

Oliva, near Dantzic, November 4, 1813.

MY LORD,

HAVING just learnt that His Majesty's sloop Ranger, is to sail this evening for England; I do myself the honour to inform your Lordship, that since I wrote last, on the 25th ultimo, the enemy has been driven from the Stolzenberg, which is only six hundred yards from the ravella of Bishofsberg, and I trust he will also be driven to-night, or tomorrow at the farthest, from two redoubts he has hitherto occupied, about the same distance from the left bastion of that work; when the first parallel, which has already been begun at Stolzenberg, will immediately be completed.

I have the honour, &c.

Extract of a Dispatch from the Marquess of Wellington to Earl Bathurst, dated St. Pé, 13th November 1813.

I HAVE omitted to draw your Lordship's attention, in the manner it deserved, to the conduct of the right division, under the command of Major-Gen. Charles Baron Alten. These troops distinguished themselves, in that they have upon every occasion in which they have been engaged. Major-General Kempt was wounded at the head of his brigade in the beginning of the day; in the attack of the enemy's works on La Petite Ile Rhodé; but continued in the field, and I had every reason to be satisfied with his conduct; as well as with that of Colonel Gohourre, who commanded the brigade of Skerrett's brigade in his absence.

COLONIAL DEPARTMENT.

Downing-Street, November 24, 1813.

A DISPATCH, of which the following is an extract, was this day received from Lieutenant-General Sir George Prevost, K. B. addressed to Earl Bathurst, one of His Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State.

Extract of a Letter from Lieutenant-General Sir G. Prevost, dated Head-Quarters, Montreal, October 18, 1813.

SHORTLY after I had the honour of addressing your Lordship, I received information that the enemy were assembling in considerable force on the Montreal frontier; apparently with a view of penetrating into the lower province. The intelligence I continued to receive from different quarters, of these movements of the enemy, and of the extent of the preparations they were making, induced me to repair to this place, where I arrived on the 25th ultimo. On reaching Montreal, I learnt, that Major-General Hampton, with about five thousand regular troops of infantry, and some artillery and cavalry, had, after approaching close to the frontier line, near Odel Town, and overpowering one of our small piquets in that neighbourhood, suddenly moved with his whole force to the westward, and was encamped at a place called the Four Corners, near the Chateaugay river.

Measures had been, in the mean time, taken, by Major-General Sir Roger Sheaffe, commanding in this district, to resist the advance of the enemy, by moving the whole of the troops under his command nearer to the frontier line, and by calling out about three thousand of the sedentary militia. I thought it necessary to increase this latter force to nearly eight thousand, by embodying the whole of the sedentary militia upon the frontier, this being in addition to the six battalions of incorporated militia, amounting to five thousand men; and it is with peculiar satisfaction I have to report to your Lordship, that His Majesty's Canadian subjects have a second time answered the call, to arm in defence of their country, with a zeal and alacrity beyond all praise, and which manifests in the strongest manner their loyalty to their Sovereign, and their cheerful obedience to his commands. The force now assembled by the enemy at different points, for the purpose of invading these provinces, is greater than at any other period during the war. Major-General Harrison has under him at Sandusky, on the frontier of the Michigan territory, about eight thousand men, ready to avail himself of the absolute command lately obtained by their navy on Lake Erie, to advance upon Detroit and Amherstburg. Major-General Wilkinson commands at Fort George and Niagara, with a force amounting to nearly six thousand five hundred men; and Major-General Hampton with a force under his command, which by the last accounts had been considerably increased, and amounting probably to about eight thousand men, is on this frontier. I have reason to think, that the whole of the above force, amounting to twenty-six thousand men, consists of regular troops, and is exclusive of ten thousand militia, which either have or are in readiness to join them.

In consequence of my solicitation to Admiral Sir J. Warren, in June last, for a further supply of seamen for the Lake service, the crews of two sloops of war were ordered by him to be sent from Halifax to Quebec; and I have the satisfaction to acquaint your Lordship that they have arrived, and that part of them have been sent to join Captain Pring at Isle Aux Noix, for the service of Lake Champlain, and the remainder have proceeded to Lake Ontario. It cannot be too much regretted, that my letter to Sir J. Warren upon this subject, which I dispatched in June last, in duplicate, was so long in reaching him, as not to be acted upon until more than two months afterwards; as, had this reinforcement arrived a few weeks earlier, it might have averted the melancholy fate which has attended our squadron on Lake Erie. A full confirmation of this disaster has reached me, through the medium of the American prints, which contain Commodore Perry's official account of the action, the only one which I have as yet received, or which I can expect to receive of it for a great length of time, in consequence of the dangerous situation of Captain Barclay, and of the death, wounds, or captivity of all the officers serving under him.

Under this misfortune, it is matter of great consolation to discover, even from the confession of the enemy, that the victory was at one period our own, and was only wrested from us, by the unfortunate loss of the services of Captain Barclay, and of almost every other officer of the squadron; leaving a crew without competent controul or command, totally unable to extricate themselves from the difficulties by which they were surrounded. On the 23d ultimo, the date of the last letter from Major-General Proctor, he was still at Sandwich, but he will be obliged to retire towards the head of Lake Ontario. I trust he will be enabled to make the enemy pay dearly for any attempt to press upon him, in his retreat to that position.

Commodore Sir James Yeo sailed with his squadron from Kingston, on the 19th ultimo, conveying transports with stores, provisions, ordnance, &c., for the centre division of the army, and arrived with them at the head of the lake, on the 25th. The enemy's fleet, on the 26th, under Commodore Chauncey, made their appearance, when Sir James Yeo endeavoured to bring them to a general action; but having the advantage of the wind, they were enabled to choose their own distance, and to prevent our ships from closing with them; the consequence was, that about fifteen minutes after the engagement began, the White lost her main and mizen topmasts, which rendered her perfectly unmanageable on a wind, that, after continuing the action for upwards of three hours, Sir James Yeo was obliged to put away before the severe gale then blowing, and get to anchor off Burlington Heights, whither the enemy, notwithstanding the advantage they had thus gained, did not think fit to follow him. The fore-topmast of the Royal George went over as the squadron anchored, but none of the other vessels were in any respect materially injured; and our loss in men must have been trifling, as Sir James, in his letter to me, does not mention it. The enemy's squadron appeared to have suffered in their sails and rigging, although they kept on the Lake, in the two following days, whilst our fleet was refitting.

I have just learned that Commodore Chauncey sailed on the 1st instant from Niagara, having under convoy a flotilla of small craft and batteaux, filled with a proportion of the regular regiments from Fort George, where they have been relieved by militia, the whole being evidently destined for Sackett's Harbour. Early on the following day, Sir James Yeo was apprised of this movement, and his ships being refitted, our squadron immediately got under weigh, with a strong breeze from the south-west; which has, I most devoutly pray, enabled them, before this, to overtake the American fleet, and, by a successful general action, to efface the misfortune of our Lake Erie marine.

Westminster, November 24, 1813.

Carlton-House, November 25, 1813.

THIS day the Right Honourable the Lord Mayor, the Aldermen, Recorder, Sheriffs, Common Council, and City Officers of the City of London, waited upon His Royal Highness the Prince Regent with the following Address, which was read by John Silvester, Esq. the Recorder:

To His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, REGENT of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland,

The humble, dutiful, and loyal Address, of the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Commoners of the City of London in Common Council assembled.

May it please Your Royal Highness, WE, His Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Commoners of the City of London, in Common-Council assembled, contemplating with peculiar exultation and gratitude the successes with which it has pleased the Sovereign Disposer of events to crown the arms of His Majesty and his Allies: should feel deficient in that duty which we owe to Your Royal Highness, were we not to avail ourselves of so prominent an occasion of tendering to your Royal Highness, our warmest congratulations on the present glorious prospects, and our renewed assurances of affectionate attachment to your Royal Highness, and His Majesty's illustrious House.

Painful as have been the feelings which, during the present arduous conflict, have been excited in our minds, by the success which for a long period attended the efforts of the Ruler of France, against rights and liberties of other countries: it has ever been our consolation that Britain, unawed and unmoved, has firmly opposed his ambitious projects, and thereby laid the foundation of that glorious resistance of the nations of the Peninsula, which, aided by the consummate skill of British Generals, and the irresistible valour of British troops, has expelled a usurper from the throne of Spain; and planting the standard of the Allies within the boundaries of ancient France, has manifested that Britain is alike the example and champion of liberty to surrounding nations.

To the same Great Cause may be attributed the ardour and enthusiasm of the Russian, Swedish, and German nations, and the consequent triumphs, which, led on by their respective Sovereigns, their armies have gained over the common enemy. In reflecting on these great events, we are called to mingled sensations of gratitude and honest pride, that the occasions of our present appearance before your Royal Highness, are the triumphs of justice and humanity.

We should be unworthy of the many privileges of which in common with the rest of His Majesty's subjects, we are the partakers, were we not to declare to your Royal Highness, that while the convulsions, by which the empires of Europe have of late years been agitated, have most sensibly affected us, with a conviction of the instability of human greatness, they have tended to impress more deeply than ever upon our minds, that (under Providence) the best security for the stability of the Crown, and the happiness of the people, is to be found under the protection of a Constitution and Government like those of this United Kingdom, where the Monarch is enthroned in the hearts of His people, and where the laws, wisely calculated to promote, are executed with a regard to the welfare of all ranks of the community.

We cannot depart from your Royal Highness's presence, without expressing our admiration of the declaration of your Royal Highness to the Legislature, that no disposition to require from France sacrifices, inconsistent with her honour, or just pretensions as a nation, will ever, on the part of your Royal Highness, or on that of His Majesty's Allies, be an obstacle to peace. And we beg leave, most dutifully to assure your Royal Highness, that the Citizens of London will not be exceeded by any of His Majesty's subjects in their readiness to make such sacrifices as shall be necessary, to enable your Royal Highness to crown with final and complete success, in the attainment of a safe and honourable peace, those efforts, which have already been productive of such great and glorious results.

Signed, by order of Court,

HENRY WOODTHORPE.

To which Address His Royal Highness was graciously pleased to return the following Answer :

I receive with great satisfaction this loyal and dutiful Address.

The unexampled successes, with which it has pleased Divine Providence to bless the arms of His Majesty, and of his Allies, afford the fairest prospect of the restoration of that independence and security to the continent of Europe, of which it has been so long deprived, by the domineering ambition of the Ruler of France.

Great and unfeigned exertions are, however, still indispensably necessary; and I am fully persuaded, that the continued and further sacrifices which they may require, will be made by the Citizens of London, and by all descriptions of His Majesty's subjects, with the same fortitude and perseverance which have eminently distinguished this country throughout the whole of the present contest, and of which we may now, with increased confidence, expect the reward, in an honourable and lasting peace.

They were all received very graciously, and had the honour of kissing the hand of His Royal Highness.

Whitehall, November 16, 1813.

Whereas, it has been humbly represented to His Royal Highness the Prince Regent, that, on Thursday the 7th of October last, between the hours of one and two o'clock in the morning, a violent assault and robbery was committed upon James Hale, woodward to the Right Honourable Earl Cowper, in the highway leading from Wellwyn to Hertford, both in the county of Hertford, at a place called the Wash, near Kingsbridge, in the said county, by three men, who knocked the said James Hale off his horse, beat him after he had fallen, with such violence as to force out some of his teeth, and when he was enseless, robbed him of his pocket-book, containing notes to the amount of £130;

His Royal Highness, for the better apprehending and bringing to justice the persons concerned in the said felony, is hereby pleased, in the name and on the behalf of His Majesty, to promise His Majesty's most gracious pardon to any one of them (except the person who actually committed the
