Men, Burgesses and Inhabitants of the Town and Borough of Pembroke, beg leave to offer unto you: Serene Highness, our sincere sentiments of condolence, on the lamented death of your Royal Consort We would not thus intrude on the sacredness of sorrow, did we not conceive it a duty we owe to the memory of the amiable virtues and the exalted character of our departed Princess, as well as to the respect we bear for that eminently exemplary conduct on all occasions, displayed by you towards Her Royal Highness; whilst therefore we express our feelings of sorrow, for an event which has afflicted the whole British Empire, and our admiration for those virtues which are the highest ornament of domestic life, we at the same time assure you of our best wishes for the welfare of your Serene Highness, and that you may long enjoy that happiness which the subjects of the King of Great Britain must in gratitude ever hope will be your reward.

By desire, and on behalf of the Meeting.

Antony Innys Stokes, Mayor.

[Transmitted by the Mayor, and presented by Sir Robert Gardiner.]

To His most Serene Highness Leopold Duke of Saxony, Margrave of Misnia, Landgrave of Thuringia, Prince of Cobourg and of Saalfeld.

WE, his Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Mayor, Corporation, and Undersigned Inhabitants of the Ancient City or Borough of Wells and its Vicinity, beg leave most respectfully to express our unfeigned sorrow, for the severe and afflicting loss which your most Serene Highness and this nation have sustained, in the death of your late excellent and gracious Consort: the anxiety which manifested itself in every quarter whilst the event was in suspense—the unexampled consternation which so universally spread itself, when the fatal catastrophe became known—the profound grief which has seized and sunk deep into the heart of every individual of every class of His Majesty's loyal subjects-furnish the purest and most unerring testimony of the high sense which this nation entertained of the eminent virtues and splendid accomplishments of this illustrious Princess, and of the magnitude of the loss which it has suffered. Long, Sir, will her virtues live in the remembrance of the British people.

We most respectfully beg leave to offer to your most Serene Highness, our best wishes for your health and welfare, and we fervently hope, Sir, that the sympathetick and profound feeling of sorrow, which has so generally and so spontaneously shewn itself on this mournful occasion, may afford some consolation to the mind of your most Serene Highness under this severe trial.
