THE following Addresses, having been transmitted to Viscount Sidmouth, one of His Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, by the several persons whose names are respectively subjoined to each Address, were presented by His Lordship to His Majesty, who was pleased to receive the same very graciously:

To the KING's Most Excellent Majesty.

The loyal and dutiful Address of the undersigned Freeholders, and other Inhabitants of Clapham, in the County of Surrey, and its Vicinity.

WE, your Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects, presume, at this present important crisis, to approach your Majesty's Throne, humbly offering the declaration of our unfeigned attachment to your Majesty's Person and Government, and of our unshaken allegiance to the British Constitution.

It is with sentiments of indignation and abhorrence that we have witnessed the recent attempts to propagate in this favoured country maxims of an iniquitous and revolutionary character, in the dissemination of which maxims it is too notorious that an audacious Faction has laboured with restless and remorseless activity.

Perverting the names of Liberty and Religion, and abusing the privileges of a Free Press, it has been their uniform design to inspire the people with a hatred of their existing Institutions, whether sacred or secular, and to withdraw their attachment from every thing they have hitherto loved and valued.

In a word, a spirit is abroad, dark, daring, and malignant; a spirit which aims to unsettle all that is fixed, to vilify all that is good, and to degrade and desecrate all that is great, venerable, and holy.

At such a moment, Sir, and amidst attempts like these, we are impelled to cherish with a warmer devotion, and to honour with a peculiar and conspicuous homage, those better lessons which we have been taught by the most admirable system of Law and Government that ever existed upon earth, and by a Religion which came down from Heaven:

a Religion which enjoins us to fear God, and honour the King, to obey the constituted Authorities, and to reverence the ministrations of the Altar.

To these true and ancient principles of the British Constitution, the bequest of our Fathers, and the inheritance of our Children, we severally pledge our firm and devoted support; and this solemn and spontaneous pledge we publicly record, in the face of our Sovereign, our Country, and our God.

To the KING's Most Excellent Majesty.

WE, your Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects, the Mayor, Aldermen, Freemen, and other Inhabitants of the Borough of Helleston and its Vicinity, in the County of Cornwall, deeply impressed with a sense of the great and invaluable Privileges with which we have long been blessed under the mild Government of your Majesty's Illustrious House, beg leave to offer to your Majesty our renewed assurance of loyalty and fidelity, and to declare our attachment to that inestimable Constitution upon which our Liberties, as a nation, and our public and individual happiness entirely depend.

At a time when the Abettors of Treason and Blasphemy are with unabated perseverance labouring, with the aid of a Licentious Press, to sap the foundation of every Institution, Civil and Religious, that has been transmitted to us by our ancestors, and convinced that the design and object of such persons are to effect a total overthrow of the blessings this country has enjoyed beyond all others, we consider it our duty to express our firm determination to resist every attempt at Insubordination or Insurrection, and to exert our best endeavours in support of the Laws, and for the preservation of our Holy Religion.

Isaac Head, Mayor
