Throne and Constitution of this country, and to oppose that torrent of infidelity and sedition which threatens to deluge our land, and we are led to make this pleadge (in defiance of all clamour, and unappelled by violence), from a conviction that we are called upon now more especially so to act, in strict compliance with that injunction which commands us to "fear God and to honour the King."

On this auspicious day we are not only reminded of your Majesty's joyful accession to the Throne of these realms, but the same moment presents to us the image (never to be effaced), of our late venerable and beloved King, your Majesty's august Father, of great and glorious memory! A recollection so dear to us all, serves to inflame our love for his Son, and gives additional fervour to our prayers, that your Majesty may live many years a blessing to this nation, and find a happy and a safe Throne in the hearts of your brave and loyal people.

To the KING's Most Excellent Majesty.

WE, the undersigned Inhabitants of the Town of Monmouth and its Neighbourhood, witnessing with abhorrence the attempts daily made by disaffected and designing men to instil into the minds of your Majesty's subjects the most hateful principles of disloyalty and disaffection, humbly approach your Throne with renewed assurances of our sincerest devotion to your Majesty's sacred Person, and most zealous attachment to our glorious Constitution in Church and State.

It required, Sire, the evidence of the times in which we live to convince us that it could be necessary for Englishmen to make a public declaration of loyalty to their Prince, and of love and veneration for their happy Constitution. But when we perceive the existence of a spirit of malignity which seizes upon every passing event, as a handle for weakening the allegiance of the people to their Sovereign, and their respect for the Laws and constituted Authorities of their country; when the powerful exertions of a licentious press are employed to mislead and pervert the public mind by the propagation of opinions which poison the very life-blood of our social existance; when our religion is scoffed at, and no branch of our Legislature escapes unreviled; when popular clamour and popular passion are made to usurp the place of justice and of judgment, we feel ourselves at such e crisis called upon to profess our determined resolution to unite in protecting your Majesty's Person and Government with our best exertions, our property and our lives, and in resisting to the utmost those enemies of our peace, who would change this country from a state of order and plenty and happiness, to a scene of confusion, and want, and woe.
