

guished the exercise of your delegated and sovereign power, secure the happiness of your subjects during the whole of your future reign! And may the same magnanimity in counsel, the same coolness in deliberation, the same firmness in action, the same perseverance in difficult circumstances, the same fortitude under unavoidable sufferings, the same enthusiasm of patriotic feeling, and the same brilliant success—the accumulated effect of all—by which Great Britain has been raised to so eminent a rank in the scale of nations, continue to the latest hour of your Majesty's reign, the subject of your Royal exaltation and praise! And when your Majesty shall at length be called to wear a brighter crown, may you hand down the earthly one which you have this day received, with honours unimpaired, to a long line of glorious Monarchs from the same illustrious Family of Brunswick!

It is with unmingled satisfaction that we are able to assure your Majesty that in the extensive and populous district in which our labours are employed, the sentiments which we have thus presumed to convey to your Royal ear are universally cherished, and with peculiar delight; not merely as arising out of the indispenable obligation of inspired commands, but also as they are habitually connected in the minds of the people with all the pleasing associations of your Majesty's paternal care and munificent bounty in sending the light of the glorious gospel and the means of moral and intellectual improvement to these distant regions of your dominions.

Permit us, gracious Sovereign, to add that we shall always esteem it our highest delight, as it is our indispensable duty, to inculcate the principles of true loyalty, as well as of pure and undefiled religion, on the people committed to our care: and while we instruct them how they ought to "fear God," to press home upon them also the concomitant precept of honouring the King.

Signed at Broadford, this 19th day of July 1821, in our name and presence, and by our desire by John Mackenzie, Moderator.
