

of the Diocese, and all other consents required by the provisions of the 16th section of the said Act, and the 14th and 15th sections of the Act, passed in the 3d year of His Majesty's reign, ch. 72, have been obtained to the proposed division; and the said Commissioners beg leave therefore to lay before His Majesty the before mentioned circumstances, and humbly pray that His Majesty will be graciously pleased to take the premises into His royal consideration, and make such order in respect thereto as to His Majesty in His wisdom shall seem meet.

His Majesty having taken the said representation of the said Commissioners into consideration, is thereupon pleased, by and with the advice of His Privy Council, to approve thereof, and to order, as it is hereby ordered, that the proposed divisions be accordingly made and effected, agreeably to the provisions of the said Act. Jas. Buller.

The parish of Hackney is bounded on the east by the river Lea, from (near) Bell's-wharf to the commencement of Temple-mills-river, and then by the said river to a place, called Bully-point, being the same boundary line that separates the counties of Middlesex and Essex; from Bully-point the boundary line turns westward through the marshes, as far as the brook, called Hackney-brook (abutting so far on the parish of Bow), and then along the course of the said brook, northward, about 350 yards, where, leaving the brook, it follows the sewer which separates Hackney-marsh from the enclosed meadows, and again falls into the same brook, near the Silk-mills, and proceeds along the brook as far as Water-lane, and then up the centre of that lane to opposite the Black Boys public-house, where it turns westward along the north side of the late John Dikewer, Esquire's estate to the south side of St. Thomas'-square, and up the centre of London-lane, and along the east and south sides of London-field, crosses Mutton-lane, and, passing by the north-west side of Cat and Mutton-field, joins Shoreditch parish (from the parish of Bow to the Cat and Mutton-field, the parish of Hackney abutts on the parish of South Hackney), from the Cat and Mutton-field it follows the boundary of Shoreditch parish as far as Mayfield-street, where it turns, north, up the middle of Mayfield-street, and along the centre of Dalston, to the end of Red Lion-lane, and then up that lane, and along Downs'-lane, to the brook at the bottom of the Downs, and then follows the course of the said brook as far as Newington-bridge (N. B. From the end of Mayfield-street to Newington-bridge, the parish of West Hackney abutts on the parish of Hackney), from Newington-bridge it turns, north, up Stamford-hill to nearly opposite the Bird-cage public-house, and then leaves the road, and proceeds, westward, round part of the estate of W. G. D. Tyssen, Esq. which is bounded by the parish of Stoke Newington on the west, and by Tottenham on the north, as far as the turnpike-road to Tottenham, and then crosses the said road, and proceeds down Bell's-lane, to the river Lea.

B.

The parish of South Hackney is bounded on the south, from the brook at the bottom of White Post-lane, to a cast iron post standing in the corner of a field, near Grove-street, in the occupation of Mr. Ridge, is bounded by the parish of Bow, and from the said cast iron post to another iron post, standing near the end of Margaret-street, it is bounded by the parish of Bethnal-green; such boundary line passes through sundry enclosed lands, and is set out all the way by cast iron posts, marked HP. and by the parish marks of Bow and Bethnal-Green; from the end of Margaret-street the boundary follows the foot-path leading to the Cat and Mutton, and along the south side of Cat and Mutton-field, being so far joined by the parish of Shoreditch, and from thence along the west and north sides of the said field, and across Mutton-lane, and along the south and east sides of London-field, and down London-lane to St. Thomas'-square, and then up the south side of the said square, and along the north side of the late John Dekewer, Esquire's estate, by the south side of the Black Boys public-house, and then down Black Boys, or Water-lane, to the brook by Berger's Colour-factory, and then, following the brook as far as a little beyond the Silk-mills, at Hackney-wick, where it leaves the brook, and passes along the north side of a field, in the occupation of Mr. Christie, to the sewer which separates the marshes from the enclosed lands, and then follows the said sewer till it falls into the said brook, and then along the said brook to the bottom of White Post-lane, being bounded all the way from Cat and Mutton-field to White Post-lane, by the parish of Hackney.

C.

The parish of West Hackney is bounded on the north and east, from Newington-bridge to Downs-lane, by Hackney-brook, and from thence the boundary line passes up the middle of Downs-lane to the end of Red Lion-lane, and then down Red Lion-lane to Dalston, and along the centre of Dalston to the north end of Mayfield-street, and down the centre of Mayfield-street to the parish of Shoreditch (being so far bounded by the parish of Hackney), from Mayfield-street to the Rosemary branch, it is bounded by the parish of Shoreditch, and from the Rosemary branch to the west end of Cock-lane, by the parish of Islington, it then passes down Cock-lane to the turnpike-road leading to Newington, and along the centre of the said road as far as Newington-bridge, being bounded from the west end of Cock-lane to Newington-bridge, by the parish of Stoke Newington.
