

To the KING's Most Excellent Majesty.

The humble Address of the Moderator and Remanent Members of the Presbytery of Lochcarron.

May it please your Majesty,

WE, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Reverend the Presbytery of Lochcarron, in Presbytery assembled, participating deeply in the sorrow which pervades all classes of your Majesty's subjects, on the melancholy event of the death of His Royal Highness the Duke of York, beg leave to approach the Throne with the most profound respect, and to express our sympathy and sincere condolence with your Majesty on this afflictive bereavement, by which your Majesty has lost a Brother endeared to you, not only by the tender ties of blood and fraternal affection, but also by a long, warm, and uninterrupted friendship, which had knit together your congenial and kindred hearts.

When we consider the warm and steady attachment uniformly manifested by His Royal Highness to the British Constitution, in Church and State, and the successful resistance which he opposed to every measure which had a tendency to weaken or endanger the Protestant Ascendancy; when we reflect on the zeal, assiduity, and impartiality which he displayed in the exercise of his important office as Commander in Chief of your Majesty's land forces; and on the beneficial and important changes which he effected in the constitution and discipline of the army, which laid the foundation of those numerous and splendid victories which humbled and laid low in the dust an ambitious and ruthless tyrant, replaced the liberties of Europe on a more solid basis than they have ever rested on before, and raised the reputation of the British arms to a pitch of glory seldom equalled, and never surpassed, in the history of nations; when we remember the exemplary care and attention which he paid to the health and comfort of the defenders of our country, and his unwearied endeavours to raise the character of the soldier, and to render the profession of arms respectable and honourable; and lastly, when we call to mind the provision he made for the orphans and widows of the brave men who fell in upholding their country's glory, and the support he gave to many charitable institutions; when we consider all these benefits which he conferred on his country, we cannot but regard the death of such an illustrious and benevolent Prince as a national calamity.

That the Almighty Disposer of events, who has hitherto so eminently prospered your Majesty's reign, and made it subservient to the happiness of your subjects and the best interests of humanity, may open up every source of consolation which our holy religion presents, and make them effectual for your Majesty's support on this painful occasion; and that after you have long worn an earthly crown, you may be put in possession of a crown of glory, is the sincere and fervent prayer, may it please your Majesty, of your Majesty's faithful servants and subjects.

Signed in name and by appointment of said Presbytery, in Presbytery assembled, at Lochcarron, this 4th day of April 1827 years, by

Jas. Morison, Moderator.

To the KING's Most Excellent Majesty.

The dutiful and loyal Address of the undersigned Individuals, Members of the Protestant Union.

May it please your Majesty,

WE, your Majesty's loyal subjects, Members of the Protestant Union, beg leave humbly to offer our most dutiful assurances of attachment to your Majesty's Royal Person and Family, and to express the deep and heartfelt regret with which we participate in the severe loss sustained by your Majesty, your august Family, and the Nation at large, in the lamented death of His late Royal Highness Frederick Duke of York and Albany,—a Prince who, by his ability, integrity, and unremitting assiduity in the discharge of his important duties as Commander in Chief of your Majesty's Forces, has conferred essential and lasting benefits on the Empire, and eminently contributed to raise the British name to its present exalted position of honour and influence among the Nations of the World;—who, by his undaunted and unceasing advocacy of the genuine and liberal principles of our admirable Constitution, in Church and State, has rendered most efficacious service and support to the Protestant interests and institutions of the United Kingdom;—and who, by his general urbanity and truly British character, has endeared his memory to every loyal and well-disposed subject of the British Realms.

We fervently implore the benediction of the Almighty on behalf of your Majesty; may the severe bereavement which has recently agitated your Majesty's royal and fraternal feelings, be alleviated by the affectionate assiduities of every branch of your Majesty's august Family, and by the dutiful testimonials of cordial attachment to your Majesty's Royal Person and Government from every quarter of the British Dominions; and may a long and propitious reign afford to your Majesty the heartfelt gratification of witnessing the increasing prosperity of the Nation at large, and the happiness and welfare of every class of your Majesty's subjects.
