

cities and towns of the empire, a relaxation of the bonds of society, and with it an increase of crime, a decline of the spirit of piety, and with it a neglect and violation of the ordinances of religion, especially of the Christian sabbath, that bulwark of the land; to resist and to stay which, we trust, will be regarded by your Majesty as the noblest aim of a Christian King, and the highest object of a Christian Government.

Connected as we are by birth and by the ties of religion, with a part of your Majesty's dominions in which the ecclesiastical and parochial institutions of the land are so well calculated to maintain a moral, industrious, and loyal people, we acknowledge especially our obligations to the Princes of the House of Brunswick, for their uniform support of these institutions so justly dear to Scotland, and we confidently rely that they will continue to receive from your Majesty the same protection as from your Royal Predecessors. Nor after the experience which we have had of your Majesty's gracious attention to the Scottish Institutions of the Metropolis, can we doubt that the Scottish Presbytery in London will at all times obtain from your Majesty the same gracious reception, which it has hitherto met with in all its approaches to the Throne.

On our part we venture respectfully to assure your Majesty, that our best endeavours shall be used to inculcate upon that portion of our countrymen, of whom the Holy Ghost has given us the oversight, the duties which belong to them as men and as Christians, teaching them to fear God, to honour the King, and obey the Laws; to cultivate peace and charity, and to live soberly, righteously, and Godly in the world.

We should be also wanting in our duty on this occasion, did we omit to express to your Majesty, how much our joy at your Majesty's accession to the Throne of these Reains is increased, by the consideration that your Majesty is blessed with a Royal Consort, who will share in the honours of the Crown, and in the affectionate regards of your people, and that the virtues and accomplishments of our Queen, equally fit Her Majesty to adorn a Throne, and to be an example to her sex, in every rank of your Majesty's subjects.

That your Majesty, and your Majesty's Royal Consort, may be long spared to be a blessing to each other and to the British Nation, and that your Majesty's reign may be signalized by the progress of pure and undefiled religion throughout every part of your Majesty's extensive dominions, is the fervent prayer, may it please your Majesty, of your Majesty's loyal and dutiful subjects, the Ministers and Elders of the Scottish Presbytery in London, in communion with the Established Church of Scotland.

Signed in the presence and by the appointment of the presbytery, assembled at London Wall, the 2d day of August 1830.
