

My people a spirit of discontent and disaffection, and to disturb the concord which happily prevails between those parts of My dominions, the union of which is essential to their common strength and common happiness.

I am determined to exert to the utmost of My power all the means which the Law and the Constitution have placed at My disposal, for the punishment of sedition, and for the prompt suppression of outrage and disorder.

Amidst all the difficulties of the present conjuncture, I reflect with the highest satisfaction on the loyalty and affectionate attachment of the great body of My people.

I am confident that they justly appreciate the full advantage of that happy form of government, under which, through the favour of Divine Providence, this country has enjoyed for a long succession of years a greater share of internal peace, of commercial prosperity, of true liberty, of all that constitutes social happiness, than has fallen to the lot of any other country of the world. It is the great object of My life to preserve these blessings to My people, and to transmit them unimpaired to posterity; and I am animated in the discharge of the sacred duty which is committed to Me, by the firmest reliance on the wisdom of Parliament, and on the cordial support of My faithful and loyal subjects.

(An alphabetical and numbered List of the Addresses presented to His Majesty, is printed at the end of the Addresses.)

St. James's-Palace, November 3, 1830.

THIS day the following Addresses were presented to His Majesty at the Levee, by the several persons whose names are respectively subjoined to each Address, which Addresses His Majesty was pleased to receive very graciously;

No. 1.

To the KING's Most Excellent Majesty.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

WE, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the High Sheriff, Nobility, Gentry, Clergy, Freeholders and Inhabitants of the County of Cornwall, beg leave to approach your Majesty's Royal Person with our condolence on the death of our late gracious Sovereign; whilst we feel in common with our fellow subjects the great loss which we have all sustained, we must not forget to acknowledge that we are peculiarly called on to express our great obligations to His late Majesty, for having, in his capacity as Duke of Cornwall, most graciously and largely contributed to the charitable and literary institutions within the Duchy.

We sincerely lament the loss of our late gracious Sovereign and liberal Benefactor; but we feel called on by duty and cordial inclination to congratulate your Majesty and ourselves on your accession to the Throne of your Ancestors. We will not, Sir, address you in the language of fulsome adulation, which would be repugnant to the manly frankness which has always formed a prominent feature in your Majesty's character.

We address you as the free-born subjects of a patriot King, earnestly praying that you may long, very long, continue to reign over these realms, possessing the affections of a faithful and united people, and those of your amiable and excellent Consort, whose numerous virtues and high character have long and justly endeared her to the British Nation.

Signed, on behalf of the meeting,

Edward Collins, Sheriff.

[Presented by the High Sheriff.]

No. 2.

To the KING's Most Excellent Majesty.

WE, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Mayor, Aldermen, and Assistants, and Inhabitants at large, of the Town of Penzance, in the County of Cornwall, beg leave to express our sincere sorrow and condolence for the loss which your Majesty and the whole Empire have experienced in the lamented death of our late most gracious and excellent Sovereign, King George the Fourth, a Prince under whose reign this country rose to a degree of grandeur and eminence hitherto unequalled, and to whose firmness and perseverance, under Divine Providence, Europe is indebted for the repose it now enjoys, after a conflict of above twenty years unparalleled in the history of the world.

Whilst, however, we hold the memory of our late Most Gracious Sovereign in the highest veneration, and sincerely deplore his loss, we cannot but contemplate with the most heartfelt satisfaction, in the person of your Majesty, the succession of a Prince of the illustrious House of Brunswick, whose thorough knowledge of the manners and habits of his subjects, and whose early education in the navy, the pride and boast of England, so peculiarly endear him to the British Empire.

In thus tendering our congratulations, we most sincerely pray that the Great Disposer of all earthly events may grant your Majesty and your Royal Consort, our Most Gracious Queen Adelaide, many years of uninterrupted happiness and prosperity, supported by a free, a loyal, and united people.

Edward Collins Giddy, Mayor,

[Presented by the Earl of Falmouth.]
