NOTIFICATION.

IT is hereby notified, that Viscount Palmerston, Her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, has received a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Naples, containing a copy of a letter from the Neapolitan Commodore to the French Naval Commander at Palermo, and which was communicated by the French Consul to Her Majesty's Consul at that place, announcing that the Blockade of Palermo and the adjacent coast had been raised.

continued in force throughout the whole of Great Britain; we, the General Board of Health, are authorized to issue such directions and regulations as the said Board shall think fit for the prevention, as far as possible, or mitigation of epidemic, endemic, and contagious diseases.

And whereas we have been informed that a vessel lately arrived in the port of Plymouth having cholera on board,

We, the General Board of Health, do hereby order and require that the Guardians of the Plymouth Union; or the Guardians of any other Union in whose jurisdiction the case may lie, shall, by themselves or their officers, enter the said vessel, or any other vessel coming into the said port in which cholera or other epidemic disease has occurred, and examine the sanitary condition of the same, and inquire into the health of the crew or crews, and, if need be; order cleansing, purification, and all other necessary measures for the prevention of disease which are authorized or required to be adopted in any dwellings on land by the general regulations of the Board of the 3rd and 18th November 1848, issued to the Guardians of the Poor throughout England and Wales.

Given under our hands and under the seal of the General Board of Health, this 8th day of June 1849.

NOTIFICATION IN RESPECT TO THE RE-APPEARANCE OF CHOLERA.

General Board of Health, Gwydyr House, June 11th, 1849.

The General Board of Health, in a letter addressed to the Boards of Guardians on the issuing of the Order in Council bearing date March 27th, 1849, for renewing for a further period of six calendar months the operation of the Act "for the removal of nuisances and the prevention of epidemic diseases," called attention to the fact, that recently in Scotland, and in various cities and towns on the Continent, Asiatic cholera had again broken out, after it had disappeared for some time; and they represented the necessity, notwithstanding the general decline of the epidemic in Great Britain, of continuing to enforce every practical measure of precaution and prevention against this disease.

The General Board of Health have continued to watch with anxiety the progress of the pestilence abroad, the similarity of its present to its former course indicating its probable return to its former seats. The identity of that course in past years led the Board to apprehend its probable increase in Russia and its return to Holland; and the fear that it might also again reach this country induced the Board to recommend the renewal of the Order in Council continuing in force the Nuisances' Removal and the Diseases' Prevention Act. Their apprehension has been realized. It has again prevailed as an epidemic at St. Petersburg; it has returned to Rotterdam; and it is now the painful duty of the Board to announce that it has re-appeared in this country, having again broken out in various and distant places in England, Wales, and Scotland.

The circumstances under which the disease has re-appeared leave no doubt that these local outbreaks ought to be regarded as general warnings, proclaiming the necessity of the immediate and general adoption of every practical measure of precaution, as well on the part of private individuals as of collective communities.

The accompanying summaries show the daily, weekly, and monthly cases of cholera that have occurred in the Metropolis, in England and Wales generally, and in Scotland, since the renewal of the Order in Council, as far as those returns have been made to the General Board of Health; but there is reason to believe that numerous attacks have occurred in different parts of the country from which no returns have been made to this Board.

From these returns it will be seen that, since the latter end of March, cholera has broken out in twelve different localities in the Metropolis, in twenty-seven towns in England and Wales, and in seventeen towns in Scotland, and that in several of these places, as in Sunderland, Liverpool, Durham, Hitchin, Gloucester, Keynsham, Bath, Merthyr Tydvil, Cardiff, Kilbirnie, Galashiels, Kelso, and Dundee, the disease has continued to spread.

Another fact is declared by these returns of great significance, which calls for the earnest attention of the local authorities charged with the execution of the Nuisances' Removal and Diseases' Prevention Act: namely, that the attacks within the last twelve days have exceeded those which have occurred during the preceding two months.

Thus in the two months from the 29th of March to the 29th of May both inclusive, the total number of cases is 428; but within the last twelve days, that is, from the 30th of May to the 11th of June, both inclusive, there have been no less than 673 cases, and at the same time the disease has manifested a decided tendency to spread epidemically, as is shewn in the numbers attacked on board the American emigrant ship at Plymouth, and in the extent to which the disease has prevailed in Glover Hall-court, Beech-street, Barbican, in the city, and also in Bermondsey.

The total number of deaths, up to the time of the renewal of the Order in Council, were 6,319 out of 14,332 attacks, or in the proportion of three deaths to seven attacks; whereas, the returns now made give 638 deaths, out of 1,203 attacks; or a proportion of more than one half—a proportion exhibiting the severity that usually marks the commencement of a general outbreak.

Under circumstances which thus afford ground for apprehension that another visitation of the scourge may be impending, the General Board of Health deem it highly satisfactory to be enabled to report the uniform success which has followed prompt and continued attention to the premonitory symptoms which generally precede an attack of this disease. In their first notification on the re-appearance of the pestilence in September 1848, they announced that there is no real foundation for the extent of popular alarm arising from the apparent suddenness of the attack; that, except at the first outbreak of the disease in a locality, it is the developed stage only that is sudden; and that, in general, distinct warning is given of the approach of the disease in sufficient time for the employment of effectual remedies against it. Recent experience has fully confirmed the truth of this representation. In Dumfries, Hamilton, Paisley, Glasgow, and numerous other places special arrangements have been made for the daily visitation of every house in the infected localities, with a view to search out incipient attacks, and to bring all such cases without delay under appropriate dietetic and medical treatment. The success of this measure, wherever it has been adopted, has been so decided as to establish the fact that we have now arrived at the knowledge of an effectual mode of dealing with this pestilence; and the authorities charged with the execution of the Nuisances' Removal and Diseases' prevention Act in any place in which cholera may hereafter break out, will incur the gravest responsibility if they do not forthwith organize an adequate staff to carry out this plan of visitation in its full efficiency.

The General Board of Health have to regret the failure of any mode of treatment that has been hitherto adopted in the developed or collapsed stage of this disease. They would not discourage efforts to arrest the progress of the malady in this stage: they believe, from information communicated to them, that individuals have been recovered from it who have received from the hands of their medical attendants the unremitting attention which is given to a person in a state of suspended animation; but few can receive such attention when the sufferers are numerous; and the register of deaths in all countries, in all climates, among all ages and classes, and whatever mode of treatment may have been adopted, shows that the only well-founded hope of saving life is by prompt and continued attention to the very first indications of an attack.

Recent experience has fully confirmed the evidence previously adduced that the localities of this disease and the localities of other epidemics are the same, not a single instance having come to the knowledge of the Board, of the spread of this scourge in groups in any other than the ordinary seats of typhus and other zymotic diseases; those seats being uniformly marked by the existence of filth, bad ventilation, overcrowding, and other local causes of atmospheric impurity. This is so certain and constant as to afford stronger grounds than ever for the presumption of culpable ignorance and neglect wherever successive cases continue to occur, in any locality, or wherever the disease widely spreads through a court, street, or district.

Recent experience further establishes the advantages that have resulted from the operations of cleansing. The first cases of cholera that occur in a locality are sometimes sudden, without any premonitory symptom: this suddenness of attack is in itself evidence of the local presence in unusual intensity of the causes of atmospheric impurity. As soon as cleansing operations have been carried into full effect, these sudden cases cease, and instead of them diarrhoea appears, which, if promptly and properly treated, does not pass into cholera. Uniform experience shows that the first and certain effect of these cleansing operations is to stop these sudden attacks; and the cases of premonitory diarrhoea that follow, if early and properly attended to, are, in the great majority of instances, arrested at once; and thus the extension and the great mortality of cholera are checked.

The proportion of deaths to attacks already stated shows that the severity of the disease itself, wherever it actually breaks out, is as great as at any former period, if not greater; and a strong presumption arises that, but for such exertions as have been made, the general visitation would be equally severe, as it still is in those localities of the towns and cities of Egypt, Russia, and other places where no sanitary improvement has been effected.

The General Board of Health have to renew their former representation, that what is done against this one disease will have been done against the entire class of epidemic diseases. It is scarcely possible to over-estimate the importance of the conclusion to which the whole tenor of recent experience leads, that in proportion to the intelligence and energy exerted for the removal and prevention of the localizing conditions on which the presence of this disease depends, it is practicable in a great degree to secure immunity from it, and that, if happily Cholera should not again prevail to any great extent, those exertions will be equally effectual against typhus, scarlet fever, diarrhoea and other native and prevalent epidemic, endemic, and contagious diseases.

By order of the General Board of Health,
Henry Austin, Secretary.
