States General, with a Lift of a Body of about 10000 Men. Those of Guelder proposed that 2 Deputies might be named, one of Guelder, the other of Overiffel, who, with one of the Council of State, might have full power to frame a Model of this Body of Men, to be put in execurion by Prince Maurice; but that was not liked by the reft. It feems the Sieur Frequet hath received some answer for his Master to the Articles of Agreement, which the Bishop heretofore deliver dhim by the States, which he hath communicated to the i entionary (de Witte) alone, who having made no kind of Report of it to the Assembly, nor of a long Conference, it is known he had with D'Estrades, and the Sieur Colbert, (Envoy from the French King,) it hath given matter of great jealousie Dit 6, 17. Its faid, the Prophet having been called before Raenswode and Clingra, he told them, in serious terms, God was angry with us, and that we must expect great and heavy Evils, while we continue in Ingratitude to those that he had made the Instruments of our good. and particularly to the House of Orange. His Presages do more especially point at intestine Troubles and Tumults at Amsterdam. In the mean time, towards the fulfilling this Prophesie, it's observed, the Generality begin to purmer at the Choice of our Alliances, and much more at the Terms on which we take them : Why we should fall into so sharp a War; and for whose sakes: Three poor words only, Litem incaptum prosequi, (the Clause in the Treaty with England, upon which we first differed, have, as we fay, cost us all this; the sense of which concerns only the Province of Holland, and among them, none but those of the East-India Company; so as indeed, the King of England had reason, in the Letter he writ to the States of the 18th Dec. to charge this whole War upon those of Holland, as the proper Authors; which hath fo pricked them, that they have used all means possible to stifle that Letter, forbidding, under the severest Penalties, that no Prister within that Province dare to Print it; but this makes it but the more fought after.

Rome, Fan. 9. The Emperor is much concerned at the trick put upon him, by the Marquis Durazzo, who under the difguise of a Companion to Count Lesty his Ambassader, Negotiated and Effablished a Commerce with the Turks, in the name of the Republick of Genouz; and to that purpole, has tent to the Pope, to make known his retentmen s of this Action of the Genoefes. And it is believed here, that the Pope both several matters to charge them with; as for banishing Cardinal Imperiali, in a time when he could not revenge it, and the contempt upon his Commands at the Crowning of the last Duke, where it icems they would, contrary to former practice, have Placed their Archbishop, tie Sieur Spinola, en a Shat lower than the Duke, whereas the Custom always has been, to place it tomewhat higher than his; which aggravated by the Emperor, the Venetian and the Spaniard, the two former being engaged in it, and not to fuffer the Gelater out of jealousie, trat finding a better employment for their money, they will no longer lend their Freafure at his Command, it is thought, will bring this new Af floot of Treating with Infidels without his Holiness's Consent, to an Excommunication, being expresly contrary to the Cannons in that case provided. We have advice from Civita Vecchia, that a Bark was fent Express from Marseilles, to advise the French Navigation to be careful of falling into the power of any English shipping, and to avoid the Ports of the Spanish Dominions, which feems to imply a Confideration between those two Crowns, to the French King's prejudice, which is here understood with extraordinary content.

Cleve, Jan. 22. Beverling will certainly be here from the States, within a day or two, who, tho at first he refused the Employment, upon fresh instances accepted of it, to the diffitisfaction of de Wine, who was much against his undertaking of that Errand. The sum of his business is supposed principally to make an excuse to the Elector, for lodging the French Troops in his Towns, without asking his Consent: To complain of a sharp Letter writ by the Elector to the States, some parts of which, they desire the the Elector upon any conditions, to levy some Troops for | hall, which He is pleased to express a very longing defire of that States Service; but the Elector does sufficiently understand their Intrigues, and hath reason enough to sufpect their juggling. We here, upon Advertisement from several parts of Germany, believe, that the Swedes have agreed with Bremen, and are marching down to the Af-The Hollanders are fittance of the Prince of Munster. preparing to fend out an Army of 10000 men, but if the Froit continue, the Prince of Munster's Forces will take another progress into their Country, before they can be in any readincs. Yesterday here was published the Match between the Prince of Denmark, and the Landigrave of Heffe's eldest Daughter, who is Neice to this Elector. An Envoy hath been at Caffel from the Prince of Denmark, with Presents to the Princess. The Elector of Branden-burgh is sending the Baron of Blomendal, Son in Law to the Baron Swerin, in quality of Envoy to the King of France. The next week we expect the Marquis of Conflans, Envoy from the Marquis of Castel Rodrigo; and the Count of Furstenberg, from the Elector of Cologne: The former about a Pension due to the Elector these 3 or 4. years, by Treaty from Spain; the later about a Meeting et Neun, betwirt this Elector, the Elector of Cologne, the Duke of Newburgh, one of the Dukes of Lunenburgh, and perhaps one from the Swedes, who, they fay, have notice of it, to agree the Time and Matter they are to treat of; and this, it is faid, gives matter of great jealousie to France.

Kingfale, Fan. 16. Several Shipsare put in hither, much torn by storm; among the rest, one belonging to Lime, on Saturday last, who was above 400 Leagues in her way to Virginia; another of this Town, the Edmond, bound for the West-Indies, who being about a month at Sea, lost most of his Masts and Sails in the storm. One Sea struck three of his Men over board, another threw two of them back into the Ship, the third drowned.

Plymouth, fan. 23. Last Evening arrived here a Vessel of Topsham from Malaga, the Master of which reports, that he met with 10 Turks Men of War in the Streights, from 40 to 60 Guns, who treated him very kindly : With this take another piece of their respect to a Ship of this Town, who being chased by two of them (which she supposed to be Dutch) the Maiter and Company for look the Ship, and betook themselves to their Boat for safety, the Boatswain fill flaying to fee the event. When the Turks came aboard, and found the Ship English, they excused their mistake, put in some of their men to carry her to Cartagen, to the Master and his Company, without the least detriment to Ship or Goods, and gave her Convoy thence to Malaga, where she now remains. Captain Erown, a Privateer, hath carried into Salcombe three Veffels, one laden with Irith Eecf and Herrings, a accoud with Linnen Cloth, and a third with Wine and Brandy.

Dover, Jan. 23. Captain Lucy, in a small Privateer, hath fere into this Harbor, a Frenchman, belonging, as is pretended, to Calin, laden with Fifth, and bound for Bourdeaux.

Covertry, Jan. 27. About 7 this Morning there hapned to dreadful a storm, (some say, accompanied with an Earthquake, Thunder and Lightning,) that among other confiderable Mitchiefs, it hath done in and near our City; it hath thrown down the flately Spire of Trinity Steeple evnn to the very Battlements; which falling on the East and North-East part of the Church, hath fo battered the Roof, rent the whole Fabrick, and made such lamentable havock within the Church, that it's believed many thoufand pounds will not repair the Damage. It hath done no farther harm, by its fall, than the killing one poor man, a stranger, passing through the Church-yard, notwithstanding so many Houses are so near it; which we look on as a wonderful mercy.

Ifle of Wight. On the 22th inflant, a lufty Ship of May. den blick, of the United Provinces, laden with Corn, and two others, were brought into Portfmouth. Hampien Court, Fan. 27. This Afternoon about 3 a Clock, His Majety arrived here from Oxford, accompanied by his Royal Highneis, and attended by leveral of His Principal Ministers, (having left HerMaj: fly, with her Royal Highness and their Attendants at Oxford) to remain fometime here, in consulting about his great Affairs of State; during which time, we hope, God will in mercy to confirm the Health of the City, that His Majesty may with safety to His Royal Person and the Publick, immediately return towhite-
