THE QUEEN'S LEVEES.

NEW REGULATIONS

TO BE OBSERVED WITH REGARD TO THE QUEEN'S LEVEES AT ST. JAMES'S PALACE,

Issued by Her Majesty's Command, February 6, 1858.

The Noblemen and Gentlemen, who propose to attend Her Majesty's Levees, at St. James's Palace, are requested to bring with them two large cards, with their names clearly written thereon, one to be left with The Queen's Page in Attendance in the Corridor, and the other to be delivered to the Lord Chamberlain, who will announce the name to the Queen.

PRESENTATIONS.

Any Nobleman or Gentleman who proposes to be presented to the Queen must leave at the Lord Chamberlain's Office, before twelve o'clock, two clear days before the Levee, a card with his name written thereon, and with the name of the Nobleman or Gentleman by whom he is to be presented. In order to carry out the existing regulation that no presentation can be made at a Levee excepting by a person actually attending that Levee, it is necessary that a letter from the Nobleman or Gentleman who is to make the presentation, stating it to be his intention to be present, should accompany the presentation card above referred to, which will be submitted to the Queen, for Her Majesty's approbation. It is Her Majesty's command, that no presentations shall be made at the Levees, except in accordance with the above regulations.

It is particularly requested, that in every case the names be very distinctly written upon the cards to be delivered to the Lord Chamberlain, in order that there may be no difficulty in announcing them to The Queen.

ADDRESSES.

Notice is hereby given, that all persons having petitions or addresses to present to Her Majesty at the Levees are to send a card having on it their names, a statement of the object of such Petitions or Addresses, and the names of the persons from whom they come, to the Lord Chamberlain's Office, before twelve o'clock on the day but one previous to each Levee; and that two other cards, having on them precisely what is written upon that sent to the Lord Chamberlain's Office, are to be taken to the Levee; one of the two cards to be delivered to the Page in the Corridor, and the other to the Lord Chamberlain, who will read its contents to Her Majesty; and, on these occasions, no other statement is to be addressed to Her Majesty.

A Deputation to present an Address is not to exceed four persons.

The state apartments will not be open for the reception of Company coming to Court, until half-past one o'clock.

BREADALBANE, Lord Chamberlain.

Buckingham-Palace, February 9, 1858.

THIS day the Right Honourable the Earl of Derby, D.C.L., and a Deputation from the University of Oxford, waited upon Her Majesty to present the following Address, which Her Majesty was graciously pleased to receive on the Throne:

To the QUEEN's Most Excellent Majesty.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

WE, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Chancellor, Masters, and Scholars of the University of Oxford, humbly beg leave to approach your Throne with the expression of our heartfelt congratulations on the Marriage of your Majesty's eldest Daughter, the Princess Royal of Great Britain and Ireland, with His Royal Highness the Prince Frederick William of Prussia.

This auspicious event, in which your Majesty's parental affection, the dignity of your Royal House, and the interests of the British Nation are so deeply concerned, is hailed by us, in common with all your Majesty's faithful people, with sentiments of thankful joy, and fervent wishes that it may be attended by the Divine blessing.

It is our earnest prayer that it may please the Giver of all good to fulfil the hopes fondly cherished by your Majesty and by His Royal Highness the Prince Consort, for the happiness and prosperity of your beloved daughter and her husband, and for the welfare of the two nations, whose ancient alliance will be drawn closer by their union.

And we are encouraged to contemplate with the greater confidence this happy prospect, by the assurance which we entertain of the high and noble qualities of the royal bridegroom, and by our knowledge of the inestimable privilege which Her Royal Highness the Princess has enjoyed of being brought up in the principles and practice of true religion, and of having continually before her eyes the bright example of domestic virtue, and of the conscientious discharge of the highest functions and duties of royalty.

Given at our House of Convocation, under our Common Seal, this twenty-eighth day January, in the year of our Lord 1858.

To which Address Her Majesty was pleased to return the following most gracious Answer :

"I thank you very sincerely for your loyal and affectionate Address, and for the additional proof which you have afforded me on this happy occasion of the dutiful attachment to my person and family constantly evinced by the University of Oxford.

"I fervently join in your prayer that it will please God to fulfil the confident hopes entertained for the lasting happiness of my beloved daughter and of the excellent Prince her husband, and I trust that their union will also promote the best interests of the two great nations whom it draws together by a new and closer bond."

Buckingham Palace, February 9, 1858.

THIS day His Royal Highness The Prince Consort, and a deputation from the University of Cambridge, waited upon Her Majesty to present the following Address, which Her Majesty was graciously pleased to receive on the Throne :

To the QUEEN'S Most Excellent Majesty.

The humble Address of the Chancellor, Masters, and Scholars of the University of Cambridge.

May it please your Majesty,

WE, your Majesty's devoted and loyal subjects, the Chancellor, Masters, and Scholars of the University of Cambridge, beg leave to present to your Majesty, our hearty congratulations on the recent happy Marriage of Her Royal Highness the Princess Royal with His Royal Highness Prince Frederick William of Prussia.

While we are not insensible to the loss which your Majesty cannot fail to experience in being deprived of the society of the Princess at an age when her many good qualities exert the most attractive influence, we have satisfaction in feeling assured that the character of the Prince, who is the favoured object of her choice, gives the best security for her future happiness, and we hail with joy the strength afforded by this additional bond of union to the long existing relations of friendship between the Kingdom of Prussia and your Majesty's dominions.

May the Giver of every good and every perfect gift pour down His blessing on this happy Marriage, and may your Majesty find ample reward for the care and solicitude with which you have watched over the education of Her Royal Highness, in the knowledge that she is happy and beloved in the country honoured by her presence, and that she is spreading an influence for good on all sides there, through the many virtues by which she is distinguished.

Given under our Common Seal, this 6th day of February, 1858.

To which Address Her Majesty was pleased to return the following most gracious Answer :

"I receive with great satisfaction your congratulations on the happy Marriage of my beloved daughter with a Prince who is in all respects worthy of her, and I thank you sincerely for the sympathy you have expressed with my feelings on an event so deeply interesting to me.

"I fervently join in your prayer that this Marriage may, by God's blessing, ensure the lasting happiness of one who is most dear to me, and who will ever cherish a grateful recollection of the affectionate interest in her future welfare, which has been so warmly and universally evinced throughout her native land."

Buckingham Palace, February 9, 1858.

THIS day the Protestant Dissenting Ministers of the Three Denominations of the cities of London and Westminster waited upon Her Majesty to present the following Address, which Her Majesty was graciously pleased to receive on the Throne :

To Her Most Gracious Majesty VICTORIA, Queen of the United Kingdom of Great and Ireland, &c., &c., &c.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

WE, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the General Body of Protestant Dissenting Ministers of the Three Denominations, residing in and near the cities of London and Westminster, approach your Royal Presence to offer our respectful congratulations on the happy Marriage of the Princess Royal with Prince Frederick William of Prussia, expressing on this occasion our continued attachment to your Majesty's person and throne. We desire your Majesty to believe that we sincerely sympathize in those parental and domestic affections which this interesting event must have so powerfully awakened, and that we follow with earnest prayers, both public and private, for the richest of earthly and heavenly benefits, the young Prince and Princess to the country which is Her Royal Highness's adopted home, and to which we trust they are destined unitedly to become so great a blessing. May it be the daughter's happiness to emulate the virtues of her mother. We have the more satisfaction in offering to your Majesty our dutiful congratulations on this joyous occasion, because the event which has thus united the Royal Houses of Great Britain and Prussia draws into closer friendship those two great nations which, by the Providence of God, have been placed at the Head of the Protestant Interest of Christendom; and we cherish the confident hope that the combined influence of the Prince and Princess will always be exerted for the promotion of religion and public virtue throughout the world.

To which Address Her Majesty was pleased to return the following most gracious Answer :

"I thank you very sincerely for your congratulations on this happy occasion, and for your gratifying assurances of attachment to my person and throne.

"I cordially concur with you in the confident hope that the Marriage of my beloved daughter, with the illustrious Prince who so well deserves the affection she has bestowed upon him, will, under God's blessing, conduce not only to their mutual and lasting happiness, but to the best interests of both her native and her adopted country."

Buckingham Palace, February 9, 1858.

THIS day the Protestant Dissenting Ministers of the Presbyterian Denomination of the cities of London and Westminster waited upon Her Majesty to present the following Address, which Her Majesty was graciously pleased to receive on the Throne :

To the QUEEN'S Most Excellent Majesty.

May it please your Majesty,

WE, your Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects, the Protestant Dissenting Ministers of the Presbyterian denomination, residing in and about the cities of London and Westminster, approach the Throne with sentiments of profound respect and devoted attachment, to offer to your Majesty our sincere and hearty congratulations on the auspicious event of the Marriage of your daughter, the Princess Royal, with His Royal Highness Prince Frederick William of Prussia. We earnestly trust that the union thus formed may be a long and happy one, fulfilling all the best hopes and wishes of your Majesty's heart, and that of your illustrious Consort.

May it also be attended with results favourable to the cause of freedom, humanity, and peace; and be the means of more closely uniting the two kingdoms of England and Prussia in the bonds of reciprocal interest and mutual friendship.

With our fellow countrymen at large, we are grateful for the example set by your Majesty and your Majesty's Consort, of those domestic virtues and charities so important to the good order and welfare of society, and which adorn alike the palace and the cottage.

Long may the guardian care of Divine Providence preserve to us that example, to shed its benign influence on the minds of the people over whom, and in the hearts of whom, your Majesty happily reigns.

It is our fervent prayer to Him who is the Giver of all good, that the choicest of Heaven's blessings may rest upon your Majesty, your Majesty's illustrious Consort, and every member of your Royal House.

To which Address Her Majesty was pleased to return the following most gracious Answer :

"I accept with much satisfaction this renewed assurance of your devoted attachment, and I thank you sincerely for the affectionate wishes which you have expressed for the happiness of my beloved daughter, and of the excellent Prince to whom she is united.

"I fervently join in your prayer that this auspicious event which more closely unites my own kingdom and that of Prussia, will, under God's blessing, promote the welfare and true interests of both these nations."

Whitehall, February 11, 1858.

THE following Address of congratulation to the Queen, on the occasion of the Marriage of Her Royal Highness the Princess Royal with His Royal Highness Prince Frederick William of Prussia, having been transmitted to the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for the Home Department for presentation, has accordingly been presented by him to Her Majesty, who has been pleased to receive the same very graciously :

To the QUEEN'S Most Excellent Majesty.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

WE, your Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects, the Mayor, Aldermen, and Councillors of the city of Hereford, in Council assembled, are most anxious to convey to your Majesty our sincere and heartfelt congratulations on the occasion of the Marriage of your Daughter, the Princess Royal, with His Royal Highness Prince Frederick William of Prussia, an event which has diffused universal satisfaction throughout your Majesty's dominions.

The solicitude which your Majesty has evinced in the education of the Princess Royal has, under Divine Providence, been the cause of her possessing, in an eminent degree, those religious and moral principles which are more precious than kingdoms; and we feel confident that we do not over estimate the value of your maternal care, when we augur therefrom the future felicity of Her Royal Highness.

We have heard with the greatest pleasure, of the estimable qualities of His Royal Highness Prince Frederick William of Prussia, and we sincerely hope that his union with a descendant of the House of Brunswick, will be the means of ensuring to England a faithful ally and cementing those amicable relations between this country and the nations of Europe, which it has been the constant endeavour of your Majesty to promote.

Permit us also to express our earnest and fervent prayer that your Majesty may long live to witness the happiness of your amiable daughter and her illustrious Consort, and thus reap the reward of those exertions which have so eminently fitted Her Royal Highness for her elevated station and future destiny.

THE outbreak at Meerut and Delhi, and reports of general disaffection among the Sepoys, caused Sir Henry Lawrence to take immediate measures for the defence of the place. Some time previously he had selected the Muchee Bowun as a site for our magazine and stores, and judging it, from its very commanding position and the moral effect that the occupation of it would exercise over the city, he in the first instance proceeded to strengthen it. The works were commenced on the 17th May, and carried forward with unremitting energy by Lieutenant Innes, under the general direction of Major Anderson, Chief Engineer, until the commencement of the siege.

The defence of the Residency was also commenced, though at first it received a secondary share of attention. It was not till after the mutiny in Cantonments (30th May), and the subsequent mutinies of corps in the district, that it became apparent that we should have probably to defend ourselves against a combined attack of mutineers and rebels from the country and city. The more clear this became, the more clearly the inadequacy of the Muchee Bowun as a fortified position became apparent. It was also seen that, if the mutineers came on in great force, we had not sufficient hands to man both it and the Residency; and having ascertained, after full consideration, the defects of the Muchee Bowun, both as regards defensive measures and shelter of troops, and the large European community, Sir Henry Lawrence made up his mind to abandon it, on the investment of the city by the enemy.

On this being decided (11th June), the defences of the Residency were proceeded with with vigor. Prior to this, the Chief Engineer was doubtful as to the extent of the force he had to shelter within the line of defences, or to man the works, but now he could form a definite plan, and he lost no time in forming a connected line of defensive works round the buildings he thought it necessary to occupy.

The Residency Compound was first protected by a line of parapet and ditch across it; a strong battery, since named "the Redan," was constructed in a corner of the Garden, which furnished a command over the iron bridge.

A battery (called "the Cawnpore") was constructed at the opposite point of our position enfilading the Cawnpore-road, and was then designed chiefly as a barrier to the approach of mutineers from Cawnpore.

Two other batteries were partially constructed, one between Gubbins' and Ommanney's Compounds, the other between the slaughter-house and sheep-pen; but neither were ready at the commencement of the siege, and want of labour prevented their being completed afterwards.

Heavy and light guns and mortars, more or less protected by parapets, were placed in various positions intermediate to the above-mentioned principal batteries. Those positions are marked in the annexed sketch, though of course various changes occurred during the siege; a gun or mortar having been frequently required to silence an enemy's battery and withdrawn when the object was accomplished.

Mr. Gubbins, by means of labourers procured by his subordinates, carried on the defences of his own compound; and the general line round our position was continued from battery to battery, and house to house, by abbatis (in lanes), and by parapets and ditches, or stockades.

Outside our line of works also a great amount of labour was required. Masses of buildings extended to within a few feet of us in nearly every direction, and though some of them would act as traverses to us from the enemy's batteries, the majority were a most undoubted source of annoyance to us, and it was necessary to proceed with their removal as vigorously as our means permitted. Several mosques, which occupied positions commanding us, were left alone, much to our future injury; but I believe the reason that prevented their removal was a good one, namely, the danger of precipitating an outbreak before we were prepared for it. But, apart from this, the demolition of private buildings was far from complete. The affair of Chintah brought the enemy upon us earlier, I believe, than was anticipated by any individual of our force and our command of labour having been limited, we had to close our gates with nothing in many places separating us from the besiegers but the width of the streets. The houses that remained became nests of rebels, and besides forming secure starting points for their mines, enabled them from under shelter to keep a deadly fire of musketry upon us day and night, and it is to it, and not to round shot, that we have to attribute the greater part of our casualties. The latter was mainly injurious in destroying the buildings occupied by our troops and camp followers; and, though the loss of life, considering the amount of battering they sustained, was much less than was to be expected, it was a constant source of danger and annoyance to the garrison, and the repair of damage entailed heavy labour on men who were weakened by exposure and want of rest.

The enemy proceeded to invest the place immediately on the return of our force from Chinhut on the 30th June. The Muchee Bowun was still garrisoned by our troops, though the treasure and greater portion of the munitions and stores had been previously removed to the Residency, and it now became an object of primary importance to withdraw the garrison without loss. A telegraphic message was communicated to Lieutenant Innes, the Engineer Officer, to the effect that the powder in the magazine, about 200 barrels, was to be used in blowing up the fort, and that the garrison was to leave at midnight on the 1st July. This order was carried out with perfect success, and the garrison marched into our gates without the loss of a man.

The Garden Battery was one of the first established by the enemy. It played on the Guard House at the Cawnpore Battery, the Battery itself, Brigade Mess, Anderson's, and Judicial Commissioner's. The combined fire of heavy guns and musketry on the Cawnpore Battery became so deadly that our guns could not be served, and eventually it was thought necessary to withdraw them and to leave the position to be defended by musketry, and to repair the parapets as fast as they were damaged by the enemy's round shot.

At the beginning of the siege, the 8-inch howitzer which fell into the enemy's hands at Chinhut, was placed out of sight of our guns on the opposite bank of the river near the bridge of boats, and kept up a destructive fire on the Residency. It was by one of the shells from it that Sir Henry Lawrence was killed.

Batteries were also established by the enemy on the road leading from the iron bridge in front of Gubbins' House, the Brigade Mess, and Post Office, and at the Clock Tower, and all the buildings were more or less damaged by them. A portion of the Residency was battered down, and six men were buried in the ruins. Many of the buildings were reduced to such a state as to appear to be quite untenable, but the garrison continued to occupy nearly all; and though the defences of the posts have been very much weakened by the continued and heavy fire, not a single one has been abandoned; on the contrary, several buildings (Financial Commissioner's, Sago's, and Innes') have been occupied and strengthened since the commencement of the siege.

When the enemy found that neither by repeated attacks, nor the destruction of our buildings, he could force us from our posts, he had recourse to mining. This had been anticipated, but the chief engineer, acting under the suggestion of the late Captain Fulton, would not take the initiative, as he apprehended that our enemies would at once follow our example, and that the unlimited command of labour they possessed would give us a poor chance of competing with them.

The first mine exploded by the enemy was at the Redan [20th July]. It preceded a general attack, and both as regards direction and distance was a complete failure. This was followed by one at the angle of the Seikh Square, and is the only one from which any loss of life on our side has been sustained. The sound of the mining had not been heard owing to the proximity of the cavalry horses, and the guard were completely surprised [27th July]. Seven drummers were killed on this occasion.

Two other mines, at the building occupied by the Martinière boys and at Sago's, were also exploded [10th August], but beyond breaking the outer line of walls, did no damage. The enemy in no case showed any great alacrity in assaulting the breaches, and we soon formed retrenchments in rear of them.

We had, meanwhile, commenced countermining, and on the 5th August foiled a mine of the enemy's against the Guard House, at the Cawnpore Battery, and since then, up to the arrival of the relieving force, we have been incessantly employed in mining and countermining. We have generally worked into their galleries, and after having frightened the miners away, have destroyed them, or, in some cases, we have blown in their galleries by charging and firing our own. I need hardly add that this was a service of danger.

Two of our mines, for directly offensive objects, require separate notice: the one at Sago's, to the enemy's guard-room, which we blew down with a loss to them of, it is supposed, between twenty and thirty men: the second, to Johannes' house, in which we destroyed above eighty of the enemy. The explosion was followed by a sortie to cover the demolition of the remainder of the house and one adjoining, which object was effectually accomplished, and relieved us from the destructive fire of many of the enemy's best marksmen. I may mention that several sorties were made on other occasions, and with equal success.

We had, on the arrival of the relieving force, fifteen galleries ready for countermining further operations of the enemy. Several of the enemy's galleries have since been discovered and destroyed.

I believe I have now noted every measure of importance with reference to the defence and attack of the place on an engineering point of view, and it remains for me to add the means at our disposal for carrying on work.

During the early part of the siege we had working parties of Her Majesty's 32nd Regiment. On one work during the night, I have had forty-two men. The soldiers, however, had their other duties to perform, they were exposed to rain, and were very often under arms, which prevented their having a proper amount of rest. They could therefore have little physical strength left to work in the trenches, and as the siege progressed, their numerical strength became so much reduced, that it was necessary to give up European working parties almost entirely, and to depend on the Sepoys. The latter came forward most willingly, and I cannot speak too highly of the way in which they worked. They have also been of material assistance in our mining operations, and a party of the 13th Native Infantry—thanks to the good management of Lieutenant Aitken—have constructed a battery for an 18-pounder, worked the gun, and dug a shaft and gallery at their own post.

There has been but one squad of European miners, eight men under Serjeant Day, all of whom have worked with the most unremitting zeal throughout.

As regards general superintendence, the late Major Anderson, Chief Engineer, designed the defences of the Muchee Bowun and Residency, and until shortly before his death, directed the construction of the various works and repairs.

Captain Fulton became the Senior Engineer Officer on the demise of Major Anderson on the 11th August. He had constructed the greater portion of the defences, powder magazines, &c., and up to the day of his death displayed the most unremitting energy, in spite of bad health, in advancing our work. In particular he took a most active part in foiling the enemy's attempt to destroy our advanced post by mines, and the manner in which he conducted the blasting operations during our sorties, invariably excited the admiration of all who were present, officers and men.

In the performance of the above-mentioned, and engineering operations generally, he received the most able and untiring support from Lieutenants Hutchinson, Innes, and Tulloh, and the late Lieutenant Birch, and latterly, since Captain Fulton's death, I have received much assistance from Lieutenant Hay, Assistant Field Engineer. The active part I myself have taken in the superintendence of works, has been small, owing to my having suffered from continued ill health.

Finally, I beg to bring to the notice of the Brigadier the excellent service performed by the late Mr. Casey, head accountant to the Chief Engineer, who had been Serjeant-Major of Sappers, and who was recommended by Major Anderson for the rank of Assistant Field Engineer; of the late Mr. Supervisor Barrett; Mr. Beale, Overseer; and Serjeant Ryder, Assistant Overseer—all of whom have left families behind them.

J. C. ANDERSON, Lieutenant,
Garrison Engineer.
