

(2). In preparing, after a personal inspection of the localities, in cases of stranding or shipwreck, a circumstantial procès-verbal as to the casualty, to be communicated to the competent authority. The Inspector-General will, moreover, provisionally possess the powers conferred on the Inspector of Technical Works, by Articles 37, 38, and 39 of the regulation relating to the river police, dated 27th June, 1860.

In cases of average, especially if arising out of collision, the Inspector-General, if able to state the facts, and if requested by one of the parties interested, will prepare a circumstantial procès-verbal, to be in like manner transmitted to the competent authority.

He will not be concerned with questions of a purely technical character relating to the improvement of the river; though he will be at liberty to suggest to the Commission any improvements likely to facilitate the navigation of the river.

ART. 4.—The Superintendents will look exclusively for directions to the Inspector-General, and will be bound to report to him any facts of interest occurring in their respective limits, as laid down in the preceding Article.

ART. 5.—The Inspector-General will be subject exclusively to the European Commission, to whom he will transmit every month, independently of ordinary communications, a general and succinct report upon the working of the regulations.

ART. 6.—The Inspector-General will make every month at least two tours of inspection from Toulcha to Sulina, independently of the more frequent trips he may be compelled to take in the ordinary execution of his duties. One of the regular tours he will make in a boat.

The Superintendents will be required to traverse once daily, either by land or water, and alternately, half the divisions respectively allotted to them.

ART. 7.—The Inspector-General and his Assistants, will be expected to be acquainted with several of the languages in use on the Lower Danube.

ART. 8.—The Salary of the Inspector-General, will be 1,000 Dutch ducats per annum, without any allowance for office or travelling expences; it is, however, to be understood, that the European Commission will provide for the appointment and remuneration of a clerk, and will furnish the Inspector with a boat, fully equipped for his tours of inspection.

The salary of the four Superintendents, will be 300 Dutch ducats each, without any additional allowance. A boat will be provided for them, which they will be expected to keep in an efficient state.

The salaries of the Inspector-General and his clerk, as also those of the Superintendents, will be a charge paid out of the Navigation Chest at Sulina.

ART. 9.—The present regulations will not in any way affect the relations subsisting between the European Commission and the Captain of the port of Sulina.

ART. 10.—The Inspector-General will receive from the European Commission of the Danube, special instructions, determining more precisely the nature of his duties.

He will be furnished, as well as his superintendents, with a warrant from the Commission to establish their authority, and with a signal flag of several colours.
