Windsor, Aug. 7.

THE following Addresses have been Presented to the King, which His Majesty received very Graciously.

To the Kings most Excellent Majesty.

The most Humble and Thankful Address of those Orphans whose Portions are owing to them from the Chamber of the City of London.

May it please Your Sacred Majesty,

After so many Loyal Addresses from all Sorts and Qualities of Your Majesties Faithful and Obedient Subjects, in acknowledgement of Your Royal Grace and Goodness, extended toward the Relief, Comfort, and security of Your Liege People, of what Persuasion or Condition soever; We the distressed Orphans, whose Hands and Hearts are to this Address, should be yet ungrateful, if we should either not joy (which we do with all possible reverence and affection) in a common Recognition of Your Majesties Divine Tenderness, for the welfare and happiness of Your Subjects, wherein we our selves have as great a share as any others, or if we should stop there without a due sense of the Mercies and Benefits which Your Majesty has been pleas'd, in a peculiar manner to confer upon us above the rest of our fellow Subjects.

We are infinitely sensible (May it please Your Excellent Majesty) of Your Princely and Fatherly Tenderness to the poor Orphans, ever since God Almighty placed the Crown upon Your Head, and that in all cases of our hopeless Extremities, Your Majesty hath still vouchsafed a favorable Ear to our Petitions, and upon all occasions taken us into Your Royal Care and Protection. We want Words to express our Gratitude, and therefore most humbly beseech Your Majesty to accept of our unalterable Vows and Resolutions, to dedicate our Prayers to Almighty God for Your Majesties long, happy, and peaceable Reign, and our Lives and Fortunes to Your Majesties Service.

Subscribed by us, for our selves, and in the behalf of many Hundreds more.

To the King's most Excellent Majesty,

The Humble Address of the Bayliffs, Recorder, Principal Burgesses, and Common Burgesses of the Town and Borough of Eye, in the County of Suffolk.

May it please Your most Excellent Majesty,

Although we resolve that the Loyalty of our Lives shall be one continued Address of Duty to Your Sacred Majesty; Yet since we find that many who have been lately Indulged, have published their Acknowledgments, we cannot be satisfied that any should pay a more vigorous Duty from the sense of their Liberty, than we from that of our Security; or that what Your Majesty hath now done for them, should be more Solemnized, than what You have always done for us. We of the Church of England must ever be solicitous to deserve that indelible Character, which Your most Gracious Majesty hath given of our strict Adherence to the Crown; And we hope a Sacred Emulation for Your Service, shall be the use that all Your Subjects will make of Your Favours. In that Contest only Great SIR, shall You hear of us of this Corporation Praying for Your Honour and Your Health; And we do assure Your Majesty, that if Your Glory, or Your Safety shall require, our Lives, and our Estates, shall be offered at Your Feet:

Constantinople, June 2. Notwithstanding that all diligence hath been used to draw Recruits out of the several Governments in Asia and Africa to serve in the Armies this Campagne, it does not appear to have had any great effect hitherto, since we can't find that there has as yet passed by this place, which has been the great Rendezvous; above 15500 Men, whereof there was 1500 only raised out of that vast tract of land which makes up the lesser Asia. And of these the distribution has been made of 3000 into the Mores, with the like number to the Islands in the Archipelago, 6000 have been sent for Hungary, and the remainder are gone by the way of the Black Sea for Bessirabia, a Province between the Niester and the mouth of the Danube, which can't but prove an inconsiderable Supply for the present great occasions of the Empire. The Considerations of this failure hath obliged the Grand Signior, by advice of the Divan, to send several Chiaux, or Court-Messengers, into the remotest Provinces, with new and stricter Orders to the respective Bassa's, that they should use their utmost endeavours to raise all the Men they could, and where they found it necessary, they should not stand upon forcing such as they found capable of Service, if they would not otherwise voluntarily engage themselves, with directions, that as soon as they got together any competent number, they should immediately send them either to this place, or to the Port of Stonich in Macedonia; threatening that all neglects, or remissness herein should be punished, not only with the loss of Estate, and Employment, but even of life itself. We are told that the severity with which these Orders have been executed, amongst other ill effects, hath had this, that it hath thrown Egypt into a Rebellion, which broke out with that violence all on a suddain, that the Mutiniers were numerous enough to be Masters of the Field, whilst the Vizier Bassa of Grand Cairo contented himself to disperse his Troops into the great Towns to keep them from joining in the Revolt, till some fitting means could be thought of to suppress it. And hereof there is advice sent by 3 several Letters directed to the Grand Signior, the Mufti, and the Caymacan.

Naples, July 5. The frequent Pyracies committed on these Coasts for above these two Months last past, hath given a great alarm in these Countries, and caused a great stop upon Trade; the small Coasters having Orders not to stir out, till the way be cleared for them by the Gallies and Vessels that the Marquis del Carpio our Viceroy is fitting out for that purpose. They write from Sicily, that the Duke of d'Uceda had made his Entrance upon that Government, with all the marks of an exact probity, with a due regard to an impartial administration of Justice, and the ease of the People, having at the very beginning banished one of the Chief Magistrates, against whom it was proved that he took Money in a Cause wherein he was a Judge. And he did not only himself refuse all Presents that were offer'd him, but had given strict Command to all his Officers and Servants not to take so much as the meanest Gratifications for the dispatch of any Business that lay before them; which extraordinary Conduct, together with a free open way of living, in a well regulated Family, hath already very much endeard him to that whole Island.

Malta, July 10. The Commander Brancaccio Grand Prior of Naples, heretofore General of the Gallies, dyed here the 3d Instant. A Galliot and two Brigantines armed from hence have brought in a Brigantine with 24 Pyrats from off the Coast of Sicily. The 7th Instant two English Vessels arrived in this Harbor, the one is the Crown Frigate, having Sir William Trumball on board.

Vienna, July 31. Here is at last a Courier arrived from the Army, but with an account somewhat different from what was expected, for it seems the Imperial Army is now repass'd the Drave; the particulars are said to be these: That the Grand Visier was arrived in the Turkish Camp, that he had brought a Reinforcement along with him, both of Turks and Tartars (but the numbers were not known) that he had found his Army in so advantageous a Post, that he was resolv'd to maintain it, and to continue upon the Defensive; therefore he had ordered the enlarging the Ditches that were made for the security of the Camp, and encreas'd the number of Cannon, that were mounted at certain distances in all places where there were any possible approach. Whilst things were in this posture, the Duke of Lorraine advanced with his Army against them, so near, that they might do execution on either side with their Cannon; But in this the Turks had the advantage; for the Works they had rais'd, not only secur'd their Men, by obliging us to mount our Shot too high, but gave them a fairer Mark upon those that lay below them; and they made use of the opportunity, plying their Guns very warmly, not without galling the Imperialists in many places, and picking off many of their Men; amongst whom was one of Note, Count Palfi a Lieutenant-Colonel, who had his Head shot off by a Cannon Bullet. The Duke of Lorraine continued thus about 24 hours, hoping to have drawn them out of their Retrenchments, or to have found a way to them through the Wood, which was attempted by the Croations, who were engag'd in skirmishing with the Turks in the Wood, but without being able to make any advance, they were forc'd to retire, leaving some of their number behind them. The Council of War being call'd, and there appearing no prospect of bringing the matter to a Battle, it was resolv'd to draw off and repass the Drave; which was executed accordingly, the Army retreating the 21st to Walpo, and passing the River on the 22d, upon their Bridges near Sylos.

Hamburg, July 29. Some differences having arisen about 4 Months since between the Magistrates and Commonalty of Lubeck, which began to disturb the quiet of that City; His Imperial Majesty had appointed the Barons Freytag and Goedens his Commissioners to inform themselves of the nature of them, and to endeavour to dispose the Parties concerned to an amicable composition of such feuds as might otherwise spread themselves, not only to the endangering of their Peace, but of that of the neighborhood, who accordingly met yesterday, and received an account from the Deputies of the Magistrates, of the rise and progress of this misunderstanding; and they have now summon'd the Commons to appear before them, in order to give in the like on their side.
