WHEREAS by an Order of Her Majesty's Privy Council, bearing date the twenty-fourth day of March, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-six, duly issued under the authority of the Act passed in the session of the eleventh and twelfth years of Her Majesty's reign, intituled "An Act to prevent, until the first day of September, one thousand eight hundred and fifty, and to the end of the then session of Parliament, the spreading of contagious or infectious disorders among sheep, cattle, and other animals," which Act has been continued until the first day of August, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-seven, and the end of the then next session of Parliament, by various statutes, and lastly by an Act of the last session of Parliament, it was ordered, that no market, fair, auction, exhibition, or sale of cattle, should be held until the first day of June, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-six, with this exception, that markets might be held, with the licence of the Privy Council, for the sale of cattle intended for immediate slaughter; and by a subsequent Order of the said Council, bearing date the twenty-sixth day of May, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-six, the time limited in the said first-mentioned Order was extended until the Lords of the Council should otherwise order:

And whereas by an Order of the said Council, bearing date the seventh day of November, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-six, reciting, among other things, the said regulation, it is ordered that, from and after the eighth day of November, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-six, markets may be held, with the licence of the Lords of the said Council, for the sale of animals, whether intended for immediate slaughter or otherwise, in any county in England and Wales, provided that no such licence shall be granted unless their Lordships shall be satisfied that no case of cattle plague has occurred in the county where such market is to be held, within one calendar month prior to the date of such licence, nor unless the market is situated at a distance exceeding ten miles from any place declared to be infected according to the provisions of the said Order of the twenty-fourth day of March, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-six; and in such recited Order of the seventh day of November, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-six, it is provided that no licence shall be granted under that Order permitting any market to be held in any port or other place into which animals are imported from any country not part of the United Kingdom:

And whereas by another Order of the said Council, bearing date the thirteenth day of April, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-seven, reciting, among other things, the said recited Order of the seventh day of November, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-six, the holding of markets with the licence of the Lords of the said Council, for the sale of animals, otherwise than for immediate slaughter, at any port or other place in England or Wales into which animals may be imported from any country not part of the United Kingdom was authorized: but it was provided that in ports or places in which licences to hold such markets as aforesaid should be granted, no cattle brought by sea from any place out of the United Kingdom, except the Channel Islands and the Isle of Man should be landed, except at some part of such port or place to be defined in some Order or Orders of the Lords of the Council, nor until some such Order or Orders shall have been so made, and that when landed, they should not be moved from such part of such port or place, except to be taken to the nearest shed or slaughter-house in such port or place which should have been duly licensed by the Lords of Her Majesty's Council for the reception or slaughter of foreign cattle, and it was ordered that they should be there slaughtered within four days from the day of landing, both days inclusive:

And whereas the port of Dartmouth, in the county of Devon, is a port into which animals have been and can be imported from countries not parts of the United Kingdom, and it is advisable to make provision for the same as hereinafter contained:

Now, therefore, the Lords of the Council do, by this their Order, set forth and define the part of the said port at which cattle brought by sea
