New Rock in Ansley Bay.

NOTICE is hereby given, that a rock has been discovered in the channel between Dissee Island and Hurtow South-West Point, Ansley Bay.

These rocks, named the Indore, from the steam transport of that name striking on them, are coral, about 100 yards in extent, and consist of several heads with from 6 to 9 feet on them at low-water. They lie E.  $\frac{1}{2}$  S., distant 660 yards from East Rock.

§ A buoy with staff and cross-boards has been placed on the patch.

There is a gradually deepening channel between Indore and East Rocks, with 17 fathoms near the latter.

Directions.—Vessels entering from the northward can pass on either side of Centre Bay Rock, and may then steer to pass a little east of East Rock, between it and the Indore buoy, as in this line there is no danger; or after passing the Centre Bay Rock, a vessel may keep well over to the eastern shore, and then pass between that shore and the Indore buoy.

A buoy has also been placed on the extreme of a spit extending from the west shore of Ansley Bay, about 3 miles northward of the anchorage; there is 6 fathoms water close outside the buoy.

[The bearing is magnetic. Variation  $4^{\circ} 40'$  Westerly in 1867.]
