Mincing-lane, immediately opposite the London Commercial Sale Rooms.

An undivided Moiety of one of the most valuable and extensive properties in the heart of the Colonial Market, held by leases direct from the Grocers' Company for 99 years from Lady Day, 1859, and let at rents amounting, in gross, to upwards of £9 500 per annum.

MR. EDWARD TEWSON (the person appointed by the Vice-Chancellor Malins) will sell by auction, at the Mart, in the city of London, on Thursday, the 26th July, 1877, at two o'clock punctually, in one lot:—

An undivided moiety of the very important leasehold property, No. 9, Mincing-lane. The premises are of modern construction, and have a handsome stone elevation, with the commanding frontage of 95 feet. The building which was erected from the designs and under the immediate superintendence of an eminent architect, is arranged in numerous suites of offices, sample-rooms, and show-rooms, every attention having been shown in obtaining the best possible light and providing for the special requirements of the colonial trade. There are four distinct blocks, each having a ground-floor and three upper stories, with separate stone staircases, and a very large basement occupied as wine-cellars. A spacious corridor on the ground-floor connects the several blocks, and there is also an entrance from Tower-street. The area of the whole is about 16,072 square feet.

The only portion of these premises at present unlet consists of three small rooms of the annual value of £55.
