

of that Pass, (on the Rhine between Bâle and Rixenfelden) which the Cantons gave notice of to the Government of the Lower Austria, desiring to know, whether the Emperor would pay the said 1500 Men, or whether they should be discharged. Upon which General Saxe, Governor of Rixenfelden, writ to the Canton of Bâle, to desire they would not only continue those Troops in that Post, but that they would likewise reinforce them. This Incident may occasion a new Meeting of the Cantons at Basle.

From the Camp near Cashill, September 19. Major-General Finsch, who marched on the 13th instant with 1000 Horse and Dragoons, and two Regiments of Danish Foot from Tipperary, left Colonel Doneg with a Detachement to burn the Bridge of Mayo, and to view the Castle, which having performed, he returned the 17th, in the Evening, with an account, that above 100 Protestant Families thereabouts were in great fear of the Rapparees, who had orders from the Governor of Cork to burn their Houses; The Major-General thereupon sent out the following night 100 Horse and 50 Dragoons, under the command of Major Finschke, to protect them, with Orders to lay themselves in an Ambuscade near the Town, if it were practicable, which succeeded to well, that a small Party being sent before to get intelligence, they took two of the Rapparees, of whom they killed one, and threatening the other, he offered to conduct them to the place where the Body of their Rapparees was; upon which Major Finschke advanced, and found a great number of People, both Horse and Foot, drawn up after their fashion; and being come near them, detached a Party of his Men to take them in flank, and placed another Party in an Ambuscade on the left. The Rapparees seeing our Men separate themselves in this manner, thought they fled, and making a great cry, the boldest of them, with their Officers, as well on Horseback as on Foot, came towards us, but no soon saw our Men turn to attack them on the right, but they fled through the Town, without firing one Shot. Our three Parties fell upon them on all sides, and killed all they found in their way. The Enemy paddled the River at the Ford, and dispersed to the right and left, they running faster on foot than our Horse could follow them. Our Men pursued them above 4 miles, giving Quarter to none. It's said, that they were between 3 and 4000, and our Officers believe there were about 500 killed, among which were doubtless the Chiefs of them, for our Men found among the slain 150 Silver-hilted Swords, and took 3 or 4 fine Horses. There were 25 of our Men detached towards Killinchy, otherwise the Slaughter would have been greater. On our side, we had not one Man or Horse killed or wounded.

Sarsfield having, as you have been already told, passed the Shannon with 5 Regiments of Horse, 5 of Foot, 3 of Dragoons, and 3 Field-pieces, marched to Birr, an open Village, and attack'd Sir Laurence Parsons's house, in which were 80 Men who fired to briskly, that they killed about 100 of the Enemy; upon which, and the news of the approach of our Forces under the command of Lieutenant-General Douglas and Sir John Lister, they retired in disorder. There is great scarcity of Forage in Connacht, which has forced the Irish to bring back great part of their Cattle on this side the Shannon, though they can hardly think to preserve them there from our Men.

This advice came to Waterford by the Fly-Yacht, who was sent from the Fleet with Orders to some of our Frigates then at Waterford, to convoy the Ammunition Ships to Cork. Captain Whetstone adds, that 'twas said at Waterford for certain, that Sir Clough Shovell was gone with the Squadron under his command towards Germany.
