Yarmouth, June 4.

ON Wednesday Night last a great ship belonging to Newcastle, but laden from Norway, ran upon a sand off Winterton; but the next morning getting off from thence, unfortunately ran ashore near that Town; where she still lies with little hopes of getting off again. This afternoon the Success set sail from this Road, steering to the Northwards, which way several light ships have lately passed for Sunderland and Newcastle.

Bristol, June 6. The new Man of War which is building in this Port, may within a week be ready to launch; and another Man of War of considerable force, is ordered to be speedily built; for which the materials are providing.

This week arrived here the Friends Adventurers from Marseilles, the Olive from Rouen, and the Fidelis with Linnen from St. Malo's; several other ships being likewise come into the River. The St. Andrew a small Man of War of London-Derry is now here ready for employment.

Rome, May 26. On Friday 1st in the Evening Bully Pincenzo Rospioglio, General of the Popes Gallies, departed from hence for Palo, and the next morning embarked with all his Train on the Gallies, the great Guns both from the Fleece and Fortrels saluting him, and about Noon set sail with a fair wind for Messina, where he is to join with the Gallies of Malta, and afterwards to pursue his Voyage, to find out the Venetian Fleet.

On Monday last His Holiness gave an Extraordinary Audience to the French Ambassador, upon occasion of the arrival of a Courier the day before from His Most Christian Majesty, communicating to the Pope the happy News of the mutual Ratifications of the Treaty of Peace with Spain; and in the Afternoon had a Conference of 4 hours with Cardinal Rospioglio; and he said that in Complement to His Holiness, the King his Master hath consented to the Pillar of Ignominy erected in the late Popes time in memory of the affront offered by the Corsick soldiers to the then Ambassador the Duke de Crequy, shall be speedily demolished.

The 20th instant Signor Pizzro Mocenigo returned hither from Naples, and the next day went hence towards Venice, being commanded home by the Senate, in Order (as he said) to his Employment as Ambassador from that Republick to His Majesty of Great Britain.

From Naples we are told that the Viceroy being not satisfied what salutes are to be given to the Popes Gallies, 'tis believed the General will not enter into that Port. That the Governour of Gaeta having saluted him as he passed with only 22 M. rts, without the Cannon which he ought to have given him, the General has sent his Commissaries to the Popes Nuncio in Naples, who representing it to the Viceroy, the said Governour is to be sent for home and imprisoned, and another person to be preferred to that Governour in his place.

Venice, June 2. All our Correspondents from the Levant speak high of the great preparations made by the Grand Signior for the carrying on the War with as much vigor and resolution as ever; which obliges the Senate to be as diligent for the relief of the City of Candia, to enable it to defend itself against the Ottoman Power; to which end they have lately hired several Dutch ships which arrived here with Merchandise, to take in provisions of Corn, Bisk, Powder, Match, with soldiers and some Cannon, and 'tis believed they may in few dayes be in readines to follow the other Convoy, some dayes since put to sea under the Command of the Provost Cornaro and Monsieur de St. Andre Montbrun; which we find hath already past by the Ile of Corfu with a fair wind.

Our Letters from Candia advise us that the Turks with the small Army they have yet in the Field, continue the Siege with much obstinacy, plying their Cannon, and endeavouring by their Mines to erect the Fort of Panigra and the Half Moon of Mocenigo, and have made some approaches towards the Port of St. Andrew, but find in all places so stout resistance, that the Visier despairing of success, has been frequently upon the point of raising the Siege; and being impatient that so small a part of the succors designed for him, are yet arrived for the recruits of his decayed Army, has often resolved to embark himself for Constantinople, to encourage the soldiers to the service; from which he has been diverted onely by his fears, least his absence might prejudice him in the esteem of the G. and Signior, and hasten the fate which frequently attends the unsuccessful.

That which much increases his despair of the reduction of Candia, is the great backwardness of the soldiery for this Employment, besides an insurrection of some of his principal Basha's, much disgusted of late with the proceedings of the Ottoman Court; which has obliged the Sultan to employ a considerable part of the forces otherwise designed for Candia, to reduce them to Obedience; they having of late much endangered the Turkish Borders.

On Monday last in the Afternoon, Monsignor Trotti the now Nuncio from His Holiness, made his publick Entry, having been met at Santo Spirito by a considerable number of Senators in their Purple Robes, and attended to his House; from thence he was the next morning by the same Senators conducted to the Colledge; where he presented his Credential Letters with an Elegant Oration, and was afterwards in the same state re-conducted to his Lodgings.

Marco Antonio Justiniano, having continued the time prefixed for his Embassy in France, is to be suddenly recalled; in whose place is elected Signior Juanne Morosini, at present Ambassador in Savoy.

Several Persons of Quality are lately arrived here from Savoy and Piedmont; partly out of a curiosity to view this City, but principally to complement the Marquis Vills upon his late return from Candia.

Some few dayes since arrived here forty Russian Slaves from the Levanse, who in one of the Islands of the Archipelago fell upon a Guard of Turks which were forcing them to Sea, killing near 50 of them upon the place; and afterwards made their escape in a ship which they found ready to put to sea. Yesterday they were examined at the Colledge, and had Passports given them for their safe return homewards; and a liberal Donative distributed amongst them.

Hambourgh, June 8. From Riga we are told, that the Czar of Muscovy, being highly concern'd at the progress of the rebellious Cossaks about Ukrania, was raising a very great Army, which he intended to employ for the reducing them to obedience; and in the mean time was not a little pleased at the news of the defeat given by his people to those Rebels; after which, followed the call of Biala Cierko, a place of great strength and importance, which without the intervention of this timely success might probably have run much danger.
