N Monday last arrived here the Exchange of this place from Dublin, some of the passengers reporting, that some considerable party of the Tories were disturbing some of the Northern parts of Ireland by their robberies; but Letters of the 14 h inftant from good hands, not taking notice of any such disturbance, gives us reason to suspect the truth of those reports.

but their design as yet kept secret.

From Milan we are advised, that several of the new railed Companies have been lately disbanded, but the S ldiers, most of them taken in to fil up the Spanish and Italian Regiments, which notwithstanding, they talk of disbanding for the better easing of the people, but since the Marquis di Mortara is in little time expected here from Madrid to take pollession of the Government, the forces are to be continued as they are, till his arrival, which is expected by the

By the same Letters we are told, that the G and Seignior was fending a new Governor to succeed in the command of the old one at Tunis, whom he had ordered to be removed for nor hipplying him with to large an affiltance of thips and Gally was e ployed to preserve the per out thrown over-board, the Galliot endeavour'd to ger away, but Was, after tome time of chace taken, and the Turks which were lest alive, put to the chain, the F ags and 8 reamers of this Prize, are sent hither as Trophi & of the Victory.

Paris, June 23. The Count de Ghamilly is returned to the Court, having near Thionville disbanded the little Atmy which he commanded in the Durchy of Luxemburg; on his return homewards, he met upon the way at Ligny in Bayre, a Coach well attended, and therein a person attitud like a Gentleman of Quality, which he perceived to weep, hastning towards Lorrain, and is since thought to be the Dutchels Mazarine disguised, and intending for Italy.

The Duke of Luxembourg's Arm y having collected all the Contributions charged upon Franche Comte, and finisht the difmantling of the f rtifications of Dole, Gray, Chaffillon upon the Meche, de la Roche, St. Anne, with several other Caltles and Forts, is fince retired unier the Command of the Count de Gadagne, carrying away with them to Aux oane, all the Ammunition, Guns and Stores, with the Bells of their Sceeples, least they might otherwise be employed to make Guns for their future defence; and has fince disbandes the greatest part of those forces. Some little time after his departure, and the restitution of that County to the Spaniards, on the 10th instant, there happened in Dele, an extraor linary turnult amongst the common people, who, to shew their Zeal for the Crown of Spain, got together, and with much disorder, attempted the killing of a Councellor of the Parliament, whom they suspected to have held a correspondency with the French; but missing of their defign, went with much speed and noise to another persons hou e, who was employ'd formerly as a Commissioner to the Prince of Conde, who happily escaped t eir rage in his own person; but their fury being then heightned, they broke in upon the house, which they rifled, killing his Wife and one of his Children, whom they suspected also to have been guilty of the same correspondency; near 20 houles, that and the next day became a prey to this rude multitude, who were grown very numerous, by an addition of many idle poor people reforting to them out of the neighbou ing Villages, hoping in this disorder, to encre se their own by the ruine of other mens fortunes; for the appearing whereof, the Magistrates were forced to draw the rest of the City into Arms, and as in accidents of great danger, to carry the Sacrament in Procession through the City, which, 'tis believed, would scarcely have put an end to that disturbance, had not a umour been spread amongst them of the neer approach of the Count de Gadagne, upon which they immediately dispersed.

They are now endeavouring to restore their ruin'd Fortifications, upon which work they are employing da ly between 7 or 800 persons, but find it a work of much difficulty and expence, and which will require a very considerable time.

His Majesty has accepted the free offer made to him by the Pere, of conferring a Cardinals hat upon some person of His Majesties nomination; and 'tis believed, the Arch-Bishop of Paris may be the person design'd for that promotion.

From Rochelle. we have intelligence, of the safe arrival there of the Sieur de Gabaret with his squadron of five men of War, and several Merchant ships from Lisbonne, from whence he has transported the French forces, employ'd in the service of the Crown of Partugal, during their late war with Spain, with the Count d Estrees and Schomberg; the Soldiers were about 4000 men, Horse and Foot, and a little after they came on shore, were by His Majesties Order disbanded.

Peace being now firmly forled on all parties, His Majehy has given order to the Duke de Beaufors, to disarme the greatest number of his ships, and to lay them up.

From Swift we are advertised, that the Cartons have appointed a general Attentible to be held at Basica the 25th initiant, wherein this believed, somewhat may be resolved upon in order to their entry into the League made for the assurance of the publick peace, and to their thister Alliance with the States of Holland, to which they seem much inclined.

Paris, June 27. His Majetty has lately recalled the Orders given to the Duke de Bearfort, for the difarming and laying up his ships, giving him in charge, to keep his Fleet at itea, and to disparch his Letters to all Ports, to prevent the discharge of his ships, but rather to fix up others to encrease the number of the Feet, and has appointed a Bank to supply the expences of his maritime assairs.

Together with our forces from Lisbonne, arrived also at Roshelle, a Jesuit, Consessor to the Queen of Portugal, confirming the report of her being with Child 3 he is passing in little time for Rome, to fatisfie the Pope concerning the la e Matriage, and to sollicite for his confirmation of the dispensation given by the Cardinal de Vendosme.

The Count de Schomberg seems much satisfied with the entertainment he received in Portugal; the States of that Countrey having before his departure acquainted him with their resolutions to continue to him for his life, the Petfion of 18 thousand Croisads, in recompense for his good services done to that Kingdom.

His Majesty has been pleased to give leave to the Duke de Chaulnes, his Ambassador at the Court of Rome, to return from that employment in September following; and tis said, he shall at his return, be made Governour to the Danphim.

The Clevalier d'Harcourt, who has formerly been employed in the Venetian service in Candras has undertaken the Command of the Lorain force; desi ned for the succour of that place; the Dule starting mose forces, pretending to employ them for the service of the Venetians; of which his Highness the Elector Palatine is grown jealous, and accordingly is likewise arming, and taking into his pay the Count de Coningsmarks Regiment, lately raised for His Majesties service. The Electors Resident has by order from his Master, complained to His Masjesty of the cause of apprehension given by the said Duke of Lorain to the Neighbourhood; and 'tis believed, some speedy course will be taken to prevent any father jealourses.

Whitehall, June 20.
