Turin, June 1.

The Prince of Commercy is arrived here, his Regiment of Horse having passed by this place on the 26th of the last Month in their march to our Camp near Vigen. The rest of the German Troops arrive daily, being very well Cloathed and Armed, and those of Milan are expected in few days, so that we shall now quickly enter upon Action. The French have drawn their Troops out of Pragelas towards Pignarol and Susa, that they may be near, and in a readines to secure the advantageous Posts among the Mountains, in case we should attempt either of those Places: Their Soldiers Defeat in great numbers, above 30, being Suiffers, Scots, and French, came hither this Week, with all their Arms, and one or two Officers. 'Tis reported that they are very busie in Fortifying Avintes in Provence; and that 2000 Men are daily at Work there. We have an account that 35 French Gallies, with several Frigats, and 3 Gallions with Bombs, having on Board 2000 Land Men, came lately before Oneglia, into which place they flung about 200 Bombs; The Inhabitants thereupon quitted it, and the Enemy having Landed, plundered and set fire to the Town, which is a small considerable Place. But the Inhabitants and the Militia, who had retired towards the Mountains, soon after returned, and fell upon the Enemy, whom they forced to Embark again in much haste and disorder, after having killed above 200 of them. Last Week the Vaudois marched into the Enemies Country by two several ways; The first Party consisted of 60 Men, who went towards the Valley of Barcelmette, where they met with a very good Booty, but apprehending they might be Attackt in their Retreat, they were forced to leave part of it behind them. The other Party was more numerous and Successful, being 600 in all, who marched towards the Valley of Keiras, and after having been abroad 4 days, returned home with 1000 Oxen, Sheep, and Mules, which with the rest of their Prey might be worth to them 25000 Crowns; And since this they have made another Incursion into the Valley of Pragelas, and brought off a Booty worth 600 Pistols.

Venice, May 31. Count Trautmanndorf, Lieutenant General of the Forces of this State, will part the next Week for the Levant. 'Tis confirmed from Dalmatia, That the Turks have sent most of their Troops towards Hungary.

Vienna, June 1. The Letters from the Imperial Camp before Great Waradin of the 24th past, tell us, That their Batteries had plaid upon the place for several days and had made a large Breach in one of the Bastions; That they had carried on their Trenches to the Counterscarpe, where they had lodged themselves; That they were so far advanced in their Work for draining the Ditch, that there remained not above 3 or 4 Foot Water; and that in four days they should be ready to give an Assault, though 'tis believed the Besieged will not let Things come to this extremity, since we do not hear that any Succors are moving towards them. The Emperor has declared the Count de Caprara, who Commanded the last Summer on the Upper Rhine, General of his Forces in Piedmont, under the Duke of Savoy; and he will begin his Journey thither very speedily, having already sent away his Equipage. The Lieutenant General Biron de Becke has received Orders to repair forthwith to Ejpek, to form a Camp near that place. The Imperial Forces that are to compose the main Army are all marching to their Rendezvous, and are to be Commanded by the Duke de Croÿ, till such time as Prince Louis of Bade arrives there, who is at present Indisposed, having had several Fits of a Tertian Ague. The Croats continue their Incursions upon the Enemy, and have obliged them to abandon the Town of Ortoka, situated on the River Umsa, between Nais and Cruppa, into which, after having got a good Booty, they put a Garison of 150 Men. The Advices from the Frontiers say, That the Turks are very backward in their Preparations for the Campaigne.

Hydelberg, June 4. The French having drawn together about 12 or 14000 Men between Winzingen and Musbach, they decamped yesterday and marched under the Command of the Marquis d'Uxelles, towards Mentz; They are Building a Fort at Altrip, on which 1000 Peasants are now at Work, whom they have Summoned from Neckerau and other Places thereabouts. The Confederate Forces are likewise in motion, in order to take the Field; The Garison of this place is to that end preparing to march, and two Bavarian Regiments are coming this way to joyn them.

Hamburg, June 10. We have advice from the Court of Hanover, That 4000 Horse and 4000 Foot of the Troops of Lunenbourg, are ordered to march forthwith, under the Command of Prince Maximilian, the Duke of Hanover's Third Son, towards the Rhine or Flanders.

Cologne, June 10. The French have this Week made an Incursion into the Country of Eyffelt, where they had on the 4th instant a skirmish near Euskirken, with a Party of Neuburgers, and obliged them (being much weaker than the Enemy) to retire towards Zulpich; Of the Neuburgers about 20 were killed, and 10 or 12 of the French, who afterwards burnt several Villages in the Duchy of Juliers. On Saturday last came to this place 40 Troopers and Dragoons, who had Deserted the French Service, with their Horses, which they sold here. The Troops of the Elector of Cologne, to the number of about 2000 Foot, and 300 Horse, are now on their march to joyn with those of Neuburg; The Munsteriens in Garison here have Orders to march; The Bishop of Munster offers to send 4000 Men more to joyn with the other Confederates on the Rhine; and the Electors of Cologne and Palatin have thereupon sent Envoys to that Bishop to regulate Matters about the march and subsistence of the said Forces. From Frankfort we have advice, That the Marquis d'Uxelles being reinforced with some French Troops from the Moselle, was come within two Leagues of Mentz, having with him a Train of Artillery of about 20 Field Pieces, the biggest of them 8 Pounders, and 2 Mortars. The Enemy to form this Body have emptied all their Garisons in Alsace, leaving those Places to be guarded by the Peasants; and their chief design seems to be to destroy the Forage, and Ruin the Country. At the same time we understand, that the Forces of the Landgrave of Hesse are on their march to joyn with those of Franconia and Suabia, (which alone make 24000 Men) and the other Confederates that are designed to act on the Upper Rhine.

Paris, June 9. The ill News they have here from Sea does strangely Mortifie and Disturb this Court, and breaks their Measures, which they so confidently depended upon, as to publish every where that they could not fail of Success. But they endeavour to soften this Decear to the People, by telling them in the Relation that is Printed here of the Engagement, That their Fleet made the Englissh and Dutch give way for several Hours, having lost one of their principal Ships, and had several others Unmasted; though at the same time they own, that the Count de Tourville, fearing to be enclosed by the Enemy, some of whose Ships had weathered his main Body, retired by the favour of a Fog and the Night, and endeavoured to get through the Race, which 21 Ships passed, but the rest being driven back by the Tide, (his own Ship being one) 3 of them, who were very much shattered, stood in to Cherbourg, where, after a vigorous Resistance, they were burnt by the Enemies Fire-ships, and 12 more were burnt at la Hague. Besides these, the Sieur de Nesmond, with 4 other Ships made towards Havre, two of which got into that Port, and the other two took their Course towards Briff; and the Sieur Gabaret went away with 4 more, of whom they have yet no News; and perhaps, when they come come to be better known, their loss will appear yet greater; However they give out that they will in a short time have a bigger Fleet at Sea, and go with it in search of the Enemy, if they shall dare to shew themselves, though 'tis much more probable that they will not in haste repair this Blow, which is so sensible to them; or at least they need not fear to lose much time in looking after an Enemy from whom they fled so lately.

From His Majesty's Camp at Velle on the Mehaine, May 30. Old Style. On the 27th past we decamped from Meldert, and marched about 3 Leagues and half to a place called Luffind. General Fleming and Count Serclaus de Fly joined us in our march with 50 Squadrons of Horse and 20 Battalions of Foot. On the way His Majesty received advice that the Town of Namur was Surrendered the day before by Capitulation, the Garrison retiring into the Castle, and the new Fort. Orders were given over Night for the Army to march next Morning, and accordingly they were in a readiness, but the Orders were Countermanded, upon Reports, That the French were going to march with all, or at least the greatest part of their Army.

The 28th we only moved to bring our selves into a Line of Battle, and that Afternoon 30 Squadrons of Horse were detached under the Command of Lieutenant General d' Auverquerque, with whom the King marched till he came in sight of the Enemies Camp, which lay on the other side of the River Mehaine; Some of their Troops which were on this side the River, made all the haste they could to retire so soon as they saw us.

Yesterday the Army marched in a Line of Battle about a League and half to this place. The King advanced with some few Troops to a rising Ground, from whence he might plainly view the Enemies Camp; whereupon they began to draw out their Army, and moved towards their Right to form their Line, about a Mile and half from us. The River Mehaine runs in a bottom between 2 rising Grounds, and on the other side the Ground is low, and marshy for above a quarter of a Mile, set thick with Trees and Underwood. We possessed our selves without any opposition of the Posts on the River; and after we had been there some time, the Enemy brought down some small pieces of Cannon, with which they fired upon us, but without doing us any hurt; and we immediately returned it from a Battery we had raised; Some of our Shot dismounted their Cannon, and others falling among their Squadrons of Horse, put them into Disorder, and obliged them to retire farther off. The same Night Orders were given for laying Bridges over the Mehaine for the Army to pass. This Morning the Bridges, which every Battalion and Squadron made for themselves, were finished, and it was intended that we should have Attackt the Enemy, but the great Rains that fell last Night made the passage much more difficult then it was before. A considerable number of Deserters are come over to us since our lying here.

From His Majesty's Camp at Ville on the Mehaine, June 2. Our Army lies still encamped in the same place, the low Grounds on each side the River being so full of Water, occasioned by the continual Rains we have had ever since our coming hither, with mighty Storms of Wind, that it is not practicable at present to pass over to Attack the Enemy. The French Army lies still in our sight, though they have removed their Camp somewhat backward; to prevent, as may reasonably be supposed, the Desertion of their Men, of whom 500 came over to us on Monday last, and they must now fetch Water behind their Lines. They have likewise removed the Men and Cannon which they had posted in the Villages near the River. The Shooting continues still at Namur; but we hear the Cattle is not yet attackt, the French playing their Batteries hitherto against the New Fort, where they have made but small Advances since we have given them a great Diversion by our lying so near them, which has obliged the French King to send 15000 Men from his Army, that makes the Siege, to reinforce the Duke of Luxemburg. A Deserter, who came in this Morning says, That the French were about sending a Detachment to the Rhine, upon advice that the Germans were moving on that side; and that they were intrrenching themselves within their Camp. Prince Waldemar has been very ill with a Cold, but is now somewhat better. His Majesty has this day appointed a Thanksgiving throughout the whole Army for our late Victory at Sea.

Magde, June 13. They write from Hanover, that the 5000 Men which the House of Luxemburg has offered His Majesty to have in Flanders, have Orders to be at their Rendezvous the 18th instant, and to march whether His Majesty shall Command them; and that an Equipage is providing for Prince Maximilian to make the Campaign.

Magde, June 13. On the 3d instant was brought ashore the Body of Rear Admiral Carter, who was killed in the late Engagement, and Buried here, all the Garrison being in Arms, and attending the Funeral.

Deale, June 7. On the 5th instant arrived in the Downes several Transport Ships, with their Convoys from the Kinsale, having on board 2000 Irish Soldiers that are going into the Emperors Service; and they are since Sailed again for Hamburg.

Whereas the Patentees and Undertakers for the Improvement of the Glass Manufacture in England, (and for preventing all future Importation of French and other foreign Glass) did think fit all Things were settled, to close their Books; And whereas all Matters are now agreed, they do give Notice, That the Books are now opened, and that all sorts of exquisite Looking-Glass Plates, Coach-Glasses, Sals, and other lustrous Glass for Windows, and other Uses (far exceeding Normandy) may be had at their several Work-houses as formerly.
