

The first of these is the fact that the British government had no intention of recognizing the independence of the United States. The British government was determined to maintain its empire, and it was not until the American Revolution had broken out that it was forced to recognize the independence of the United States.
 The second of these is the fact that the British government was not prepared to grant the Americans the same rights as it granted its own subjects. The British government was determined to maintain its empire, and it was not until the American Revolution had broken out that it was forced to grant the Americans the same rights as it granted its own subjects.
 The third of these is the fact that the British government was not prepared to grant the
 Americans the same rights as it granted its
 own subjects. The British government was determined to maintain its empire, and it was not until the American Revolution had broken
 out that it was forced to grant the Americans
 the same rights as it granted its own subjects.