

to Charing Cross, where the Proclamation was again read by Windsor Herald. The Procession then moved on to the site of Temple Bar, where a temporary barrier was placed across the street to mark the boundary of the City of London. Bluemantle Pursuivant of Arms advanced between two trumpeters, preceded by two of the Life Guards, and demanded in the usual form admission into the city. On being admitted he was conducted by the City Marshal to the Lord Mayor, who was in attendance in his state carriage, together with the Aldermen, Recorder, Sheriffs, and other Officers of the City. The Order in Council having been delivered to his Lordship, the barrier was directed to be removed, and Bluemantle Pursuivant was conducted to his place in the Procession which then entered the City.

At the corner of Chancery-lane the Proclamation was read a third time by Norroy King of Arms. The Lord Mayor, Aldermen, Recorder, Sheriffs and Officers of the City then followed the Procession to the Royal Exchange, where the Proclamation was read the fourth and last time by Somerset Herald.

Royal Salutes were fired at St. James's Park and the Tower of London.

The streets through which the Procession passed were filled with spectators, and the acclamations were general.

The Officers of Arms and the Serjeants-at-Arms were afterwards entertained by the Lord Mayor at the Mansion House, and returned in the same order to St. James's Palace.
