Minute Guns were fired while the Procession moved from Westminster Hall to Paddington Station.

The King, the Members of the Royal Family, the Royal Representatives (with the exception of those whose names appear in the carriage procession), the Earl Marshal, and the Master of the Horse, rode on horseback.

The Coffin was taken from the Gun Carriage, on the arrival at Paddington Station, by a Bearer Party of the Brigade of Guards, and was placed in the Royal Train, which also conveyed The King and the other Royal personages who took part in the procession.

On arriving at Windsor the Coffin, preceded by the Earl Marshal, was removed from the train by the Bearer Party of the Brigade of Guards, and placed upon a Gun Carriage drawn by the Royal Navy. The Coffin was covered by a Pall of Purple Velvet and the Royal Standard, on which rested the Crown, with the Regalia, also the Insignia of the Order of the Garter.

Guards of Honour from the Royal Navy and the Brigade of Guards were mounted at the Great Western Railway Station, and from the Brigade of Guards at St. George's Chapel.

The Procession to St. George's Chapel moved in the following Order:—
