Foreign Office,

Whitehall, August 9, 1915.

The KING has been pleased, by Letters Patent under the Great Seal of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, bearing date the 28th June, 1915, to confer the dignity of a Baron of the said United Kingdom upon the Right Honourable Sir Francis Leveson Bertie, G.C.B., G.C.M.G., G.C.V.O., His Majesty's Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary to the French Republic, and the heirs male of his body lawfully begotten, by the name, style, and title of Baron Bertie of Thame, in the county of Oxford.

Whitehall, August 10, 1915.

His Majesty the KING has been pleased to award the Edward Medal of the Second Class to James Wagenaar for bravery in saving life in the City Deep Gold Mine, Witwatersrand, South Africa, on the 29th October, 1913.

Wagenaar was working in the mine when he was informed by a native that five other natives down a winze, or steep incline, had been overcome by the fumes from explosives used in blasting (the debris brought down had interfered with the ventilation and prevented the dispersion of the gas). Wagenaar, tying a wet cloth round his mouth, immediately descended the winze to the place where the natives were lying in various stages of collapse, and, without assistance, brought out four of them in succession. He proceeded down the winze for the fifth time to bring out the last native, but was unable to carry him up more than a few yards, as he was fast being overcome by the fumes, and had himself to be helped out of the winze. Three men, who subsequently brought out the fifth native, also collapsed from the effects of the gas. It is probable that but for Wagenaar's brave action all the natives would have succumbed to the effects of the fumes. Wagenaar and the five natives were all in hospital for some days.
