

Lt. Switzer Gardner Freeborn, Art.

For conspicuous gallantry in action. He handled his gun, under very heavy fire, with great courage and initiative, greatly assisting the infantry in locating and demolishing enemy machine guns.

Lt. John Ernest Genet, Eng.

For conspicuous gallantry in action. He personally successfully supervised and directed the maintenance of all signal communications to the rear, with great skill and determination, working under great difficulties and continual bombardments.

Lt. William George Gidley, Inf.

For conspicuous gallantry in action. He gallantly assisted in dispersing an enemy bombing attack. Later, with great courage and skill, he led his platoon to its objective in the attack.

Lt. Charles Green, Inf.

For conspicuous gallantry in action. He repelled two enemy counter-attacks with his machine guns, displaying great gallantry and initiative throughout.

Lt. George Lazenby Greenlay, Cav. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He, when in command of stretcher-bearers, by his gallantry and self-sacrifice, was at all times an inspiration and example to his men when under very heavy fire.

Lt. Charles Greffard, Inf.

For conspicuous gallantry in action. He led his platoon in the attack until partially buried for several hours. Later, although wounded, he continued in action, organising against and repulsing numerous counter-attacks. He displayed great courage and initiative throughout.

Lt. Almond M. Grimmett, Inf.

For conspicuous gallantry in action. His company commander having become a casualty, he rallied his men and constructed a trench in "No Man's Land" with great skill and determination, despite great difficulties and severe losses.

Capt. (temp. Maj.) Harry John Hall, Inf.

For conspicuous gallantry in action. He held his part of the line under intense fire for three days, displaying great courage and initiative throughout. He has previously done fine work.

Lt. James Arlon Hamilton, Inf.

For conspicuous gallantry in action. After being buried by a shell and having several ribs broken, he still continued in command of the line, and by his fine example inspired the men until rendered unconscious by another shell.

Lt. William Hoey, Inf.

For conspicuous gallantry in action. He led a bombing attack with great courage and determination, thereby enabling the battalion to hold their left flank. Later, although wounded, he stuck to his duty and would not leave the trench.

Lt. Frank Hamilton Hunter, Inf.

For conspicuous gallantry in action. He led his company, with great gallantry, to the capture of an enemy strong point. Later, under intense fire, he captured an enemy trench with great courage and determination.

Lt. Harry Hutchison, Inf.

For conspicuous gallantry in action. Although wounded, he commanded his company with great courage and determination. Later, he materially assisted in capturing an enemy trench. He was again wounded, but remained at duty until he was ordered back to the rear.

Capt. Howard Brown Jeffs, A.M.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Although wounded himself, he tended the wounded under very heavy fire with great courage and determination. Later, being again wounded, he remained on duty till relieved.

Lt. Robert Lawrence Junkin, Eng.

For conspicuous gallantry during operations. He built a strong point by day under heavy shell-fire and in difficult circumstances. On another occasion he wired the front when the enemy was only 60 yards distant. He has done other fine work under fire.

Lt. Cornelius James Keller, Inf.

For conspicuous gallantry when leading a raid. He went in front of his men, and, meeting a party of four of the enemy, captured one and accounted for two. His party accounted for nine more in the trenches and unknown numbers in the dug-outs, and brought back ten prisoners. He was himself wounded.

Capt. Herbert D'Olier Kingstone, Inf.

For conspicuous gallantry in action. When the enemy threatened his right flank he organised and led a bombing party, driving the enemy back. Later, his hand being blown off and also being severely wounded in the legs, he refused to leave his men until they had gained their objective. He has previously done very fine work.

Lt. Arthur George D. Kittson, Art.

For conspicuous gallantry during operations. He was sent forward as F.O.O. after two officers had already become casualties. He followed the advancing infantry and succeeded in establishing telephonic communications with his headquarters. He then went forward with an infantry bombing party, and carried out a useful reconnaissance constantly under machine-gun and rifle-fire.
